On the eve before the band left for Grand Nationals in Indianapolis, wind members warm up in block formation. "Performing on the field at Lucas Oil Stadium was one of the best feelings I have ever had. It verified that all of our persistence and efforts were totally worth it," Erin Tansimore (12) said. The band placed second in the nation in their AA class.

Living on the Edge

L. Debich (11)

Test-taking, current events presentations, or deciding what to wear on a date made us anxious. Clammy hands, profuse sweating, and shaky breaths alerted us that nervousness had certainly taken hold. Whether jumping out of an airplane, performing at a nationally-covered event or, in Erin Tansimore's (12) case, to fearlessly ascend upward into the sky, certain students lived on the edge.

Rising above its summit, Tansimore climbed Seneca Rocks in West Virginia not once, but twice. The mountain stood as one of highest inaccessible peaks on this side of the Mississippi River and required equipment to reach the pinnacle.

"I was terrified the first time, and I was literally bawling in the beginning. I was shaky when the ledge we were on started getting smaller and smaller," Tansimore said.

On a more media-covered topic, Katie Perroz (12) said, "Haley Potter and I got to perform in the halftime show of the Citrus Bowl on New Year's Day last year in Orlando. I think the best part was cheering in front of so many people, and looking out into the crowd in the stadium at the end was so overwhelming. The routine wasn't super hard, but the practices and rehearsals were long and miserable because we had to have it perfect, and it poured during our long outdoor rehearsal."

Still, sometimes living on the edge became a personal mission, such as when Jake Dykes (12) jumped out of an airplane. "I've always enjoyed going outside my comfort zone. Going skydiving started off as a joke for me, but eventually it turned into a reality. I wasn't actually that nervous, but I've learned that if you don't purposely try new things, you'll miss out on a lot," Dykes said.

Stepping into the unknown felt almost as nerve-wracking as Dykes' step out of the plane. Moreover, expanding our horizons during the high school years served as a platform for finding ways to realize our true potential in life, and it even permitted us to enjoy a thrill or two along the way.

In a heated game against Plum, the student section tosses Danni Bistline (12) into the air to celebrate a touchdown. "It felt like I was on a rollercoaster; I got so much air that I could see the tops of all the students," Bistline said. The group of senior boys also tossed Letizia Collini (12).

what's in a nickname?

Parents had to choose their children's names before they had any hints of a personality. Still, for various school events, students picked nicknames for the backs of their T-shirts to represent their personalities or a funny memory.

Squirrely

"For marching band, I put Squirrely because in winterguard in seventh grade, my nickname was Squirrel so everyone started calling me 'Squirrely.'"

Shirley Summerhill (12)

Rocky and Strick

"Alaina Schwarz and I put Rocky and Strick because those were our grandpa's nicknames, and they were best friends. We found out in ninth grade they were best friends."

Hannah Strickengloss (12)

Lil Snupe

"I put Lil Snupe because whenever I went to a gifted competition at McKeesport, I told this kid to follow me on Twitter. He thought it said 'Lil Snupe,' so now everyone calls me that."

Lily Shupe (12)

Mrs. Hampshire (fac) chose soloists to sing the anthem for every home game.

Upperclassmen looked intimidating to freshmen who did not know them. Asking an upperclassmen for help opening a locker or finding a class might have seemed scary, but once they had seen the "cool, collected" juniors and seniors dressed up like pirates or popping balloons off each other's chests, they suddenly seemed a little friendlier.

School marching band adds to atmosphere

With every touchdown scored, members of the marching band quickly stood a bit taller. They raised their instruments, glowing gold with the fluorescent lights illuminating the field, and played the Kiski fight song that had rang out during games for so many years before.

Maggie Mullooly (10) said, "The marching band actually makes the football games happen. We do a parade before home games, we form the Big K, and then make a tunnel for the players. We even travel to some away games. We always perform our show at halftime, and sometimes we do have to endure boos from the opposing team's student section."

Despite the hype of the student section and the game itself, the band contributed remarkably to the Friday night game atmosphere.

Jake Murray (12) said, "We love coming out and making those great Friday nights happen. We really get into things whenever we play our stand tunes. We also play the National Anthem before the games and the Alma Mater afterwards."

"My proudest moment was this year when I made cheer captain for the junior varsity squad. I tried so hard during tryouts, and the hard work all paid off."

Students discuss merit of fall drama selection

by
A. Grimm (10)

In the fall drama She Kills Monsters, the character Agnes Evans has to kill the demons she had faced since her sister Tilly's death during her journey through her sister's Dungeons & Dragons notebook. Hours of practice and poring over their scripts allowed student actors to learn how to embody their characters, from the way they walked across the stage to the way they spoke.

Savannah Bruno (12) felt only excitement when she heard about the play selection. "I absolutely loved it, and I couldn't wait to be a part of it," Bruno said. "The storyline was very interesting and was different than any other play we have done. It was exciting to be a part of something unique."

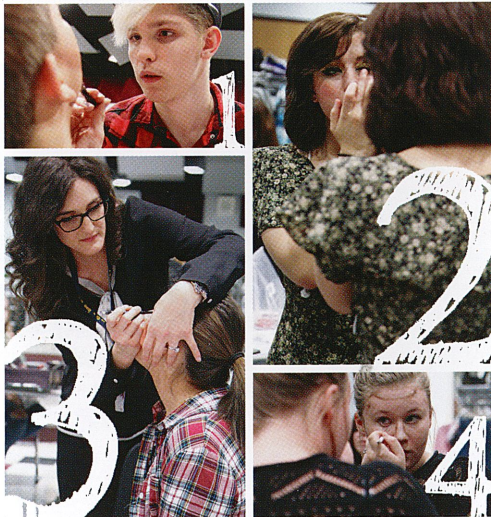

"I played Dungeons & Dragons with the whole cast," Isabella Jordan-Spiering (10) said. "I got into character by practicing a lot and by really embracing my character. Playing Dungeons & Dragons really helped me understand the play a lot more. I had a lot of fun performing in the play and will never forget the amazing action scenes I was in."

Christian Barker (12) also had a lot to say about embodying his character. "I read the script over a lot," Barker said. "I took the information from the script and tried to imagine how the character would act or feel. I had a lot of fun portraying a new unique character, and this play was definitely a memorable experience for my senior year."

"When I heard the play was She Kills Monsters, I had no idea what it was going to be about," Tanner Knapp (12) said when explaining his thoughts on the play. "After researching though, I felt that it was a great choice because it was a new play, it was written in the last five years, and it had many topics that are still controversial today. There were also fight scenes and a fantasy genre that I found to be very interesting."

photos: C. Terrill (12)

Making a character come to life and seem humanly relatable must occur to ensure a fall drama's success. Each actor had to learn how his/her character would say the lines and how he/she would react to conversation. Still, looking the part helped to make the acting believable. Deciding how characters would style their hair, whether they would opt for the natural look or pile on the eyeliner, and exactly what kind of lipstick a hot elf wears, helped to bring magic to the stage.

all that make-up

1) "I do makeup for all of the shows. I'm in it because I'm an artist. I like creating something new."

Caleb Dull (11)

2) "We usually showed up around 4:00 to start getting ready. The hardest part for me was learning how to put on those fake eyelashes. They were a hot mess."

Erin Andrews (11)

3) "Even though I'm not directing, I still wanted to be involved because the fall drama is my favorite part of my job."

Mrs. Filippone (fac)

4) "I put on a lot more than I usually do, but I like doing my makeup because it's cool to watch my face transform into my character."

Spinning her staff, Julie Shannon (11) introduces her character, Kaliopé. "My character is a dark elf, which is a lot different from last year's show when I played a mean old lady," Shannon said. A fan of theater, Shannon also performed in the spring musical 42nd Street.

on the attack...

Against her first obstacle of The Game, Agnes Evans, played by Becky Minda (10) gets attacked by bugbears in an early scene. "I think I'm a lot like my character, especially with how sarcastic she is," Minda said. The show ran from November 19th through the 21st.

"I love to perform. When I was six, I sang on stage for the first time. I will never forget the feeling of performing. Now, I continue performing in show choir."

Anchoring at Telethon, Haley Potter (12) attended each night of Telethon Week. She had to juggle cheer practices, basketball games, and a Show Choir concert during that busy December 14-18 week.

All of the proceeds collected from the Telethon went to the local Salvation Army and St. Vincent de Paul.

"It's beginning to look a lot like Christmas" drifted through the air of the cheerful atmosphere in the atrium. Despite a lack of snow during the Christmas season, spirits remained high. The atrium transformed into an idyllic area for Christmas photo shoots, Breakfast with Santa, and the Telethon thanks to dedicated art three and four students, along with Student Council volunteers.

The decorations ranged from snowflakes to trees and from tinsel to stockings, all set up mainly by Student Council. A wall length mural of Disney characters dressed in Christmas attire painted by art students provided the finishing touch.

Lily Gongaware (12) said happily, "We decided this year to go with a more kid-friendly theme. Disney seemed like a perfect fit. You're never too old for Disney."

Characters on the wall left high schoolers reminiscing about their childhoods while it drew quite a reaction from the younger kids flowing in and out of the school during the busy holiday season. Art teacher Mr. Yuhasz recommended the idea for the project. After working on the mural for about a week and a half, the time came to admire their meticulous and dedicated efforts.

"It took a while to paint, but it was definitely worth it. My favorite part was seeing the kids faces light up," Stephanie Conklin (12) said.

Campers reflect on times with Mother Nature

A bird whistled in close proximity, completing the melody created by the sounds of nearby streams and leaves rustling in the breeze. Camping created a safe and calming environment for students as they set out on adventures with their families over the years.

Dylan Knowles (10) said, "You learn pretty quickly when you're camping that you have to think simply in order to be independent. My family has been camping for a lot longer than I have. My parents used to go on these big hikes in Alaska."

Every second held potential for new surprises in the wilderness.

"We were hiking in the Shenandoah Valley when we came to this clearing with a waterfall. I was wading through the water when my dad noticed a water moccasin not far from where I was standing. After I saw the poisonous snake, I was more than observant for the rest of the hike," Makayla Lovas said (10).

"My most recent proud moment happened while kayaking. My uncle, who had a past stroke, fell out of his canoe into the river. I had to jump in after him and get him to safety."

stage
E. Knell (12)

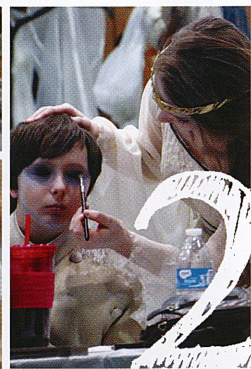

Fog rolled onto the stage, billowing around the feet of the Addams Family. Their faces remained motionless, even when the rest of the cast backstage started crooning, "Oh, oh, oh." To look at them from the audience, no one would ever guess the progress they had made since the dress rehearsals two nights before.

"I'm the stage manager, so I've watched pretty much every rehearsal since the beginning. When it was about a week before the show, and we still were still adjusting where people stood and making sure everyone knew their lines and entrances, I was a little nervous for them," Emily Knell (12) said. Whether behind the curtain or on center stage, the pressure to pull off a major production ran rampant throughout the cast and crew.

Kevin Gress (12) said, "It gets really stressful before the end because everyone who isn't a lead doesn't realize how intense the last two weeks are. They don't take it as seriously because everyone has to learn entrances and stuff. We all still had lots of schoolwork to do just when the practices lasted longer and longer. It's still my favorite part though because everything gets pulled together."

"It's stressful because when you're going through something, if there's any mistakes, you worry everything will fall apart during the show. You know everything's going to be okay, but it puts that moment of doubt in your mind," Grace Fowler (10) said.

In the end, cast and crew enjoyed sellout crowds as their doubts scattered like startled bats the minute the curtain opened each night.

Although students felt convinced they looked like the undead by the end of a week full of rehearsals and school, the makeup crew still felt they had work to do. Each ancestor in the musical stood in line until his or her turn came for airbrushing. After the base of white paint, the addition of blue eyeshadow and dark circles completed the faces. Cast members helped each other to perfect the looks in order to appear as ghastly as possible.

"Life is one big road with lots of signs. So when you're riding through the ruts, don't complicate your mind . . ." Bob Marley once said. The constant Scantron tests, homework problems, and other responsibilities that came with high school left students' heads spinning. Students saw riding as a way to break free from the madness and keep from driving themselves crazy.

Most students preferred the thick forests of Pennsylvania over the open road, regardless of whether they rode quads, dirt bikes, or even snowmobiles. Riding served as a hobby and a way for students to clear their minds and escape reality for a short time.

Jeremy Husarik (12) said, "My dad got me into quads, but for me, it's all about getting out there on the trail away from everything and hitting some jumps." The fresh air, lifelong friends, and engine roar created the perfect atmosphere. It made no difference whether they decided to hit a distant trail or host a backyard mud bash.

According to Jack Tamasy (12), Eagles Point tops the list of places to ride. "I like to hit Eagles Point with my friends, but only with my Suzuki because Honda sucks."

On the other hand, even snowmobiles had stress-relieving potential.

Cameron Miller (10) said, "I prefer snowmobiles out of everything I've driven, including race cars, because it's a nicer drive. We kind of just bought them, and now we can go wherever...whenever we want."

ink that matters

The ink of tattoos created more than a visual. It served as a reminder of the meaning behind the art and its original inspirations. Arms extended as cameras flashed to capture the artwork in photos. Tattoos etched onto the bodies of students held a number of meanings. Some students had a religious reasoning behind their ink. Meanwhile, others explained that they derived inspiration from the desire to keep the memory of a late relative alive.

1) "My father designed it as a birthday present. He included my favorite flowers, a hummingbird for my mom, and a dragonfly." Jacquelyn Williams (12)

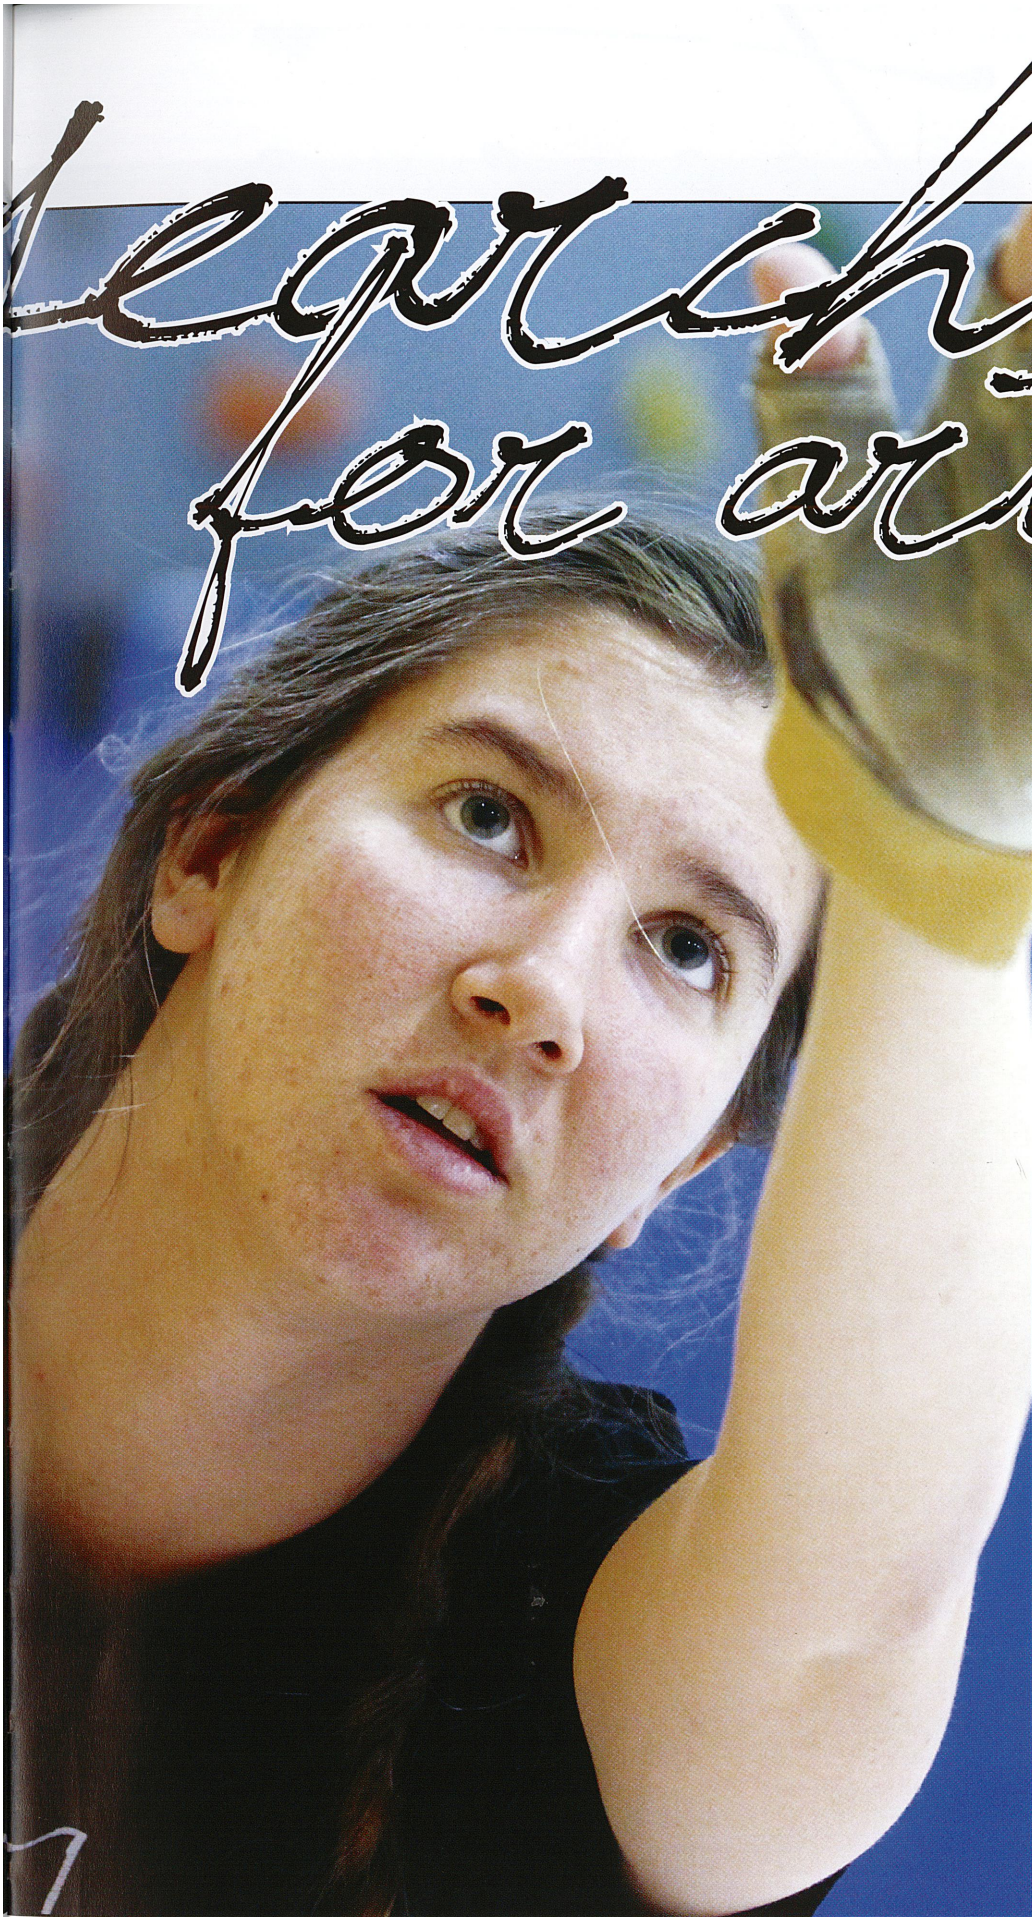

2) "As a ten year tribute for my grandfather's death, I got this tattoo in May of 2015. He liked to work on cars and was definitely an outdoorsman." Cheyanne Shellhammer (11)

3) "I got this tattoo to always have a reminder that I need to stay strong in my faith and never let anything ever break it. I got it at Ink Illusions in Shelocta last July." Tanner Bracken (11)

4) "I got my tattoo the day after Christmas of 2014. It represents my faith and my beliefs. My mom told me the quote I got tattooed, and it made me really think." Josh Swanson (12)

Inspiration for art comes from multiple sources

Inspiration stems from somewhere deep inside everyone. Artists have the unique ability to convey their inspiration through endless mediums.

Elizabeth Debich (11) said, "Painting has always been extremely calming for me. Whenever I use my brush, it's like I'm writing without a pencil. Telling a story on canvas is something I really enjoy."

Seeing firsthand the positive effect art had on younger kids also helped to inspire one artist.

Mykenzie Fitch (12) said, "I love going to all of the elementary school art shows. Seeing their work reminds me of where I started, and while I'm there, I get to help little kids with whatever project they have set up. I find a lot of inspiration in their excitement over art."

Some artists, instead of using acrylics and brushes, preferred using words to paint a picture.

"Whenever an idea comes to me, I always make sure to put a note in my phone no matter what I'm doing, so as soon as I get the chance, I can write about it," Taylor Love (10) said.

"My proudest moment was when I finished my painting that I did of a surfer for the school art club. They hung up in the hallway."

Students might forget the music the DJ played or the theme of the Homecoming Dance, but the pictures they took ensured they could never forget how they looked for better or for worse. What it took to get ready for those fateful pictures included everything from 'a simple putting on makeup' to 'rushing around the week before to find a dress.'

"The week before Homecoming, everyone is on Pinterest or Instagram trying to find pictures of how they want their hair or nails done. It's not as extreme as when Prom rolls around, but people get pretty into it," Paige Horwatt (11) said.

"I actually went a week before Homecoming to get my dress, but it was really big on me so they had to alter it. I had to get it done right before cheer practice one day, and I really had to rush around," Lindsay Bielek (12) said.

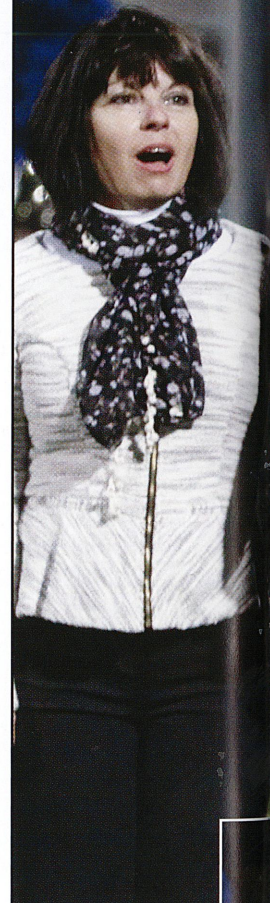

Casey Maher (12) also had trouble finding a dress that suited her.

"I had a hard time finding a dress that fit me in the right way. I went the week of Homecoming and ended up finding a dress at David's Bridal, but it was a size too big. I just wore it that way because I really didn't have time to fix it," Maher said. "I just prayed that it didn't fall down sometime during the dance."

"Nothing about getting ready was hard. My date wore a black dress, pictures were at my house so we didn't have to drive anywhere, and getting ready wasn't hard because I'm a guy," Michael Iacovino (12) said.

Olivia Chepkevich's (10) pre-Homecoming preparations went almost as smoothly as Iacovino's did.

Chepkevich said, "The hardest parts of getting ready were tying my date's bow tie and having to take pictures out in the cold."

After finding out the school had voted them onto Homecoming Court, the six nominees remembered that they would have to choreograph two and a half to three minute skits and perform them in front of the entire school. The fateful assembly happened during the Friday pep assembly before the Homecoming game. The girls and their escorts spent hours after school getting every step right.

1) "We made up our dance the day before the pep assembly. Still, better late than never."

Letizia Collini (12)

2) "We put together some songs that I really liked and performed it for everyone. It only made sense to have Alan dance with me because he is one of my closest friends. It wouldn't have been complete without him."

Danni Bistline (12)

3) "Our theme for the dance was Classic. All of our songs had a classic feel, and to top it off, we dressed really classy."

Lindsey Caldwell (12)

4) "The bench press was probably the hardest part of the routine because it was definitely much different than benching a metal bar with weights on it."

When confronted with their fears, students could feel the pins and needles that immediately migrated to their feet, a warning not to continue. The anxiety would build up in their chests, resulting in a physical sensation of panic. To top it all off, students often had no idea from where their fears originated.

Carmen Pastor (10) said, "I have a very strong fear of heights. I constantly worry about falling while being high up in the air. I believe I am afraid of heights because I never did anything to overcome my fear. I was always apprehensive, so I've always tried to avoid anything that had to do with heights."

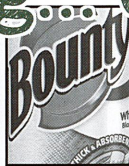

Danni Bistline (12) also spoke of her fear about driving a vehicle. "I am scared to drive because it is a lot of responsibility, especially when it comes to people's lives. I am also afraid to get into an accident that could injure myself or others. I have an irrational fear of pain, and I don't handle it very well," Bistline said.

Some fears had less to do with actual pain that could result from the situation and more to do with emotional fear.

"I have this complex about wearing sweatpants in public," Angela Koontz (10) said. "I have no idea when my fear started, but I just feel like I'm picking up a ton of germs when I do. I'd rather wear a pair of jeans or a dress any day."

Art students competed in "The Chalk Walk" which took place in downtown Vandergrift. Each student had the fundamental talent to make beautiful artwork, but complications arose when while taking part in this challenge which exposed them to the elements of the outdoors, including sweltering heat and the difficulties of working with chalk.

- 1) "The Chalk Walk was a blast. I had a fantastic time drawing everything. It was a little hectic at the end when we had so little time to finish. My friends made it worthwhile." Abra Gold (11)
- 2) "It was hard to move around because there was chalk everywhere, and it stained everything badly. When I took a bath, the tub turned black. We looked like miners." Liz Debich (11)
- 3) "The heat really caused us to slack off a bit. By the end of the day, most of us had headaches and dehydration. It was our first year, so we weren't prepared." Austin Fitzpatrick (10) filming facts...

In the fall, Cinemax used the Casino Theater to double as the Banshee City Hall for their hit series Banshee. Nicole Lookabaugh (12) said, "My cousin was a security guard for the actors in the series." The filming company also transformed the main street through town into Banshee shops and stores.

Vandergrift transforms into TV show set

During summer while driving past the Casino Theater, local students noticed that their theater no longer had the same name. A new sign hung above the doors, letting residents know the building had morphed into the Banshee City Hall. Trailers holding lighting equipment and props became semi-permanent fixtures in the parking lot across from AJ's. Vandergrift had transformed into Banshee, the set of an action-drama series about a thief who impersonates a sheriff with his new identity in the small Pennsylvania town of Banshee. Locals auditioned as extras, allowed the producers to use their property for scenes, and spent a lot of time complaining about the inconveniences it caused.

"They didn't even start filming until two in the morning sometimes, and they wouldn't stop until the sun came up," Jenna Boylstein (12) said. She added that the cast and crew created a frustrating life for herself and her neighbors in their apartment building. "On one of the first days, I was coming home from work, and I tried getting into my building. They had security guards telling me I couldn't come in and they had to go get my mom to check to see if I lived there; it took about an hour. Still, the cast was really nice, even though they were in the way," Boylstein said.

"I have won many raffle drawings, including $100 and a bicycle. I have also won best prize for painting mini-pallets at the Vandergrift Fine Arts Festival."

what to do when music stops

Stop
A. Koontz (10)

Mouths dropped open in awe as a turn sequence finished flawlessly and flowed into the next step. All of a sudden, the music came to a halt. This nightmare came to life on stage at the winter talent show.

"My dance teacher trained me that if my music ever stopped, I had no choice but to keep dancing. My school friends only get to see me dance once a year, and it was kind of embarrassing that the music stopped while they were watching, and we didn't get to do it again," Katie Lewis (12) said.

Unfortunately, the rest of the routine continued on in silence.

Olivia Shirley (10) said, "Everything that night was going wrong, and I had a bad feeling that something was bound to happen.

As soon as the music stopped, my instinct was to keep going; I wasn't even scared. By that point, it was just kind of funny, and the only thought that went through my head was 'wow'."

The dancers' biggest frustration lied in the lost meaning of the performance.

"It was a contemporary piece that was sort of a slam poem about bullying, but it had music in the back. I think the audience would have felt the story a lot more if they could've heard the words," Shirley said.

In the end, a single performance could not detract from their love of dance.

"Dance will always be there for me, and it makes me who I am," Shirley said.

Sammie Cooper (12), president of the Chinese Club, chaired the event. Cooper put a large amount of time and effort into organizing a fun and profitable event for the student body since all the equipment had to be rented from a company out of state.

"The event was hysterical," Mackenzie Toth (10) said. "Basically, a bunch of kids put on these plastic hamster balls and ran around in them trying to play soccer. The soccer was definitely not the best part though. The best part was seeing everyone running around like crazy and trying to hit each other. It's interesting because sometimes people get really into it when they went against their friends or enemies."

Michael Michelli (12) said, "The game was awesome. We got really pumped up as a student section. It was fun because we got to see two teams battle bubble-to-bubble for the championship. There was a game last year as well, and they just keep getting better. It honestly looked like the students were getting knocked down like rag dolls. It was insane, and it made the crowd go wild."

Don't try it when you have bronchitis, but usually, laughter makes the best medicine. Friends who make you laugh until you cry and your stomach seem about ready to explode helped to relieve the stress of the school day and put everything into a lighter perspective.

Four students talked about the importance of the things that "cracked them up."

- 1) "The junior cheerleaders started to have a brawl with the senior cheerleaders at the Powder Puff Game. Ben Fiore came over and made us laugh even more." Caddis Coscarelli (12)
- 2) "We started laughing when we saw Savannah for the first time in her costume for the play, and it was more revealing than we expected." Ryan Gress (12)
- 3) "Nakeyya made a joke about how hard it was to dance like that. It was weird at first, but then we got the hang of it and made the best of it." Jen Anderson (11)

Small things matter

Story:
T. Cravén (10)

Sometimes, little things can make your day

On most days, students had to adhere to their hectic schedules. As the days began to drag on, students sometimes looked to escape high school life in any way they could. Finding positivity when everything went wrong proved difficult, but two learners found comfort in embracing the simpler things in life.

"For me, drawing drones out everything else that's going on," Erin Andrews (11) said. "I love it, and it has the power to turn my whole mood around. I'm constantly sketching. Even the smallest doodles help me to relax."

For Emily Williams (11), her day brightened once the school day ended. "After having four tests in one day, it's a relief to hear Mr. Christie say 'Okay. You can put the computers away.' Those words could bring a tear to my eye. A weight is lifted off of my shoulders once I know that the day is over for sure."

"My proudest moment is when I made a three-pointer at the end of the game to tie it. The whole team was happy and proud."

good times

Acceptable road trip and vacation foods included Twizzlers, barbecue chips, and any other junk food purchasable at Sheetz. Once the snacks safely made their way to the backseat of the car along with the luggage, the play list for the trip became the focus. This aspect of a trip proved vital; control of the aux cord in the presence of friends provided a time to prove one's musical prowess, but family trips could involve painfully twangy bluegrass music or flashbacks to the 80s.

However agonizing the musical selection, the vacations students took still deserved to become immortalized in pictures, and students graciously sent in photos to the yearbook staff for the purpose of this spread. Traveling across the country to the beaches of California or just taking a quick trip up to Niagara Falls gave learners the chance to get away, unwind, and remember that life went on outside the borders of the school district.

Metal cleats clacked against the locker room floor as clumps of mud relented, letting go of shoes and littering the floor. The sunflower yellow locker doors slammed back against each other, making the athletes jump. The smell of sweat, which seemed scarily similar to old seafood, diffused into every corner of the room. Perhaps the hormonal changes of teenage years caused that odor. Still, Victoria's Secret perfume and generously sprayed Axe cologne to mask it did next to nothing. Whether we spent a period every day wishing we did not have to change into our gray and blue gym uniforms, or we returned back to the locker room to peel off our jerseys after a 110% effort sweat, we wore uniforms like costumes. We transformed when we donned them -- into athletes who felt invincible in the way only a teenager can, into the drum major whose heart beat in 4/4 time with the music, into a thousand different parts.

"I was excited when I saw my costume for the Fall Drama. It gave me confidence, unlike when I played a dead person, a gorilla, and an old lady," Julie Shannon (11) said.

Wearing our costumes made us feel capable of undertaking any task, including directing the 130 people in the marching band.

Drum major Casey Maher (12) said, "A lot of times we get dressed on the bus, but as soon as we pull onto the arena where we are competing, all of us become completely silent; the uniform demands it. At big competitions, I pull out brand new white gloves, because I feel more confident and prepared when they fit well."

Some costumes seemed less about turning into a better version of ourselves and more about embodying a completely different character.

"I wore three costumes this year. I was a nun for Halloween, Santa for the last day before Christmas break, and the school mascot for football games. I loved being the mascot, and I wish I would have done it earlier. I wasn't afraid to embrace the character, even when I almost got into a dance battle with Norwin's Knight mascot," Lane Bauman (12) said.

NETFLIX

Always time for Netflix

A. Koontz (10)

Up to their necks in applications, homework, and stress, seniors always managed to make time to binge watch their latest on-screen obsessions. Time spent watching TV meant an escape from the high school halls that occasionally seemed like they could double as the prison setting of Orange is the New Black.

Students undoubtedly adored their beloved Netflix accounts, but love did not mean they willingly paid for an account listed under their name.

"I won't even try to list all of my friend's accounts I use because there are just too many. I never feel like paying for my own," Tanner Knapp (12) said.

In order to have properly binge-watched Netflix, students needed the perfect viewing location. Makayla Savinda (12) said, "I usually prefer Emily Knell's sun room and if not, lying in my bed works just fine, too."

The Netflix and TV-watching workload increased when holidays rolled around.

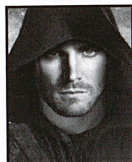

"Every year, I absolutely have to watch the Harry Potter Marathon on the ABC countdown, at least twice. Something about Hogwarts in the snow makes everything feel like Christmas," Knapp said.

Savinda said, "October requires watching The Nightmare Before Christmas all month long. It holds me over until December when it comes time to have The Grinch and Rudolph on constant repeat."

All in all, the senior class proved they would work very hard to make time for Netflix and their favorite programs.

Discuss the last television series that you binge watched.

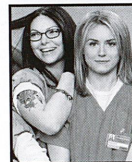

"I spent a weekend in the summer watching the whole Arrow series. It was action-packed and really entertaining. The story line was amazing," Alex Rainey (12)

"Over the summer, I spent about a week binge-watching The Office. I didn't get through all nine seasons, but I watched a ton of them," Nick Mascolo (12)

"I have spent hours and hours watching Orange is the New Black. It didn't matter what I had to do at the time, Orange was my priority," Brittany Tygielski (12)

"I have sat and watched episode after episode of Malcolm in the Middle. I like the way that they chill and settle. It makes me laugh," Cameren Turner (12)

Two senior patriots sign up for military service

With red, white, and blue blood pumping through her veins, Samantha Engler (12) made a heartfelt decision to enlist in a branch of the military after she graduated high school.

"I plan on going into the communication field with the National Guard," Engler said. Specifically, she intended to go into the Pennsylvania National Guard.

"I chose this branch because of its easy application to real world jobs," Engler further said.

"I am definitely already preparing for basic training because I know how difficult it will be. I am altering my diet, and I am also training physically so I don't die when I start basic. I am kind of nervous about being separated from home for so long. In the end, I will be proud of myself. I know I'll make it through," Engler said.

Another patriot, Makayla Savinda (12), also made plans to enlist. Savinda wanted to become a Foreign Service Officer, and enlisting now jump-started her experience level.

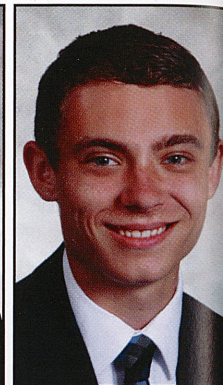

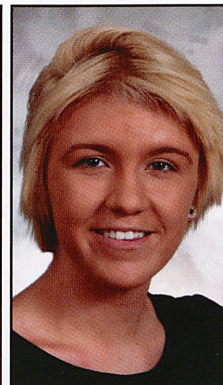

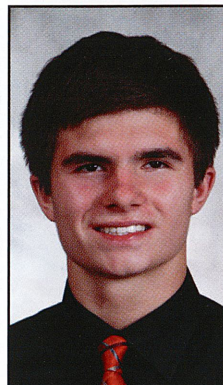

"I'll probably enlist before December, and I'll be in military intelligence. I'll be enlisted for six years," Savinda said. She also began physical training to prepare herself for basic.

Savinda humbly said, "I'm very excited to travel and help people within the National Guard."

decision to serve

A star-spangled banner flew high up in the swollen clouds. A powerful voice pierced through a crowd. "Spick and spanly" dressed men lined up in their uniforms. Three senior men desired to experience those visions first-hand. Still, the decision to serve came with some concerns.

"I will go to WVU next year and major in engineering. I liked WVU because they have an impressive engineering college and a close family atmosphere."

Christian Fox (12)

Senior year arrived, and college life approached quicker than ever. With the average four-year in-state college costing over $9,000 per year and most out-of-state ones well above $12,000, students honed in on an affordable college that they could love. Not only did the price tag throw up red flags, but choosing a college demanded a colossal commitment. Settling on a school became one of the hardest decisions to make during senior year, and four seniors developed a game plan to tackle these obstacles.

Lincoln Clayton (12) banked on the scholarship route. "I want to go to SRU because they have a good football team. Hopefully, I will get a football scholarship. I also like that SRU isn't too far from home. But, if I don't get the scholarship, I'll probably look at another school somewhere else."

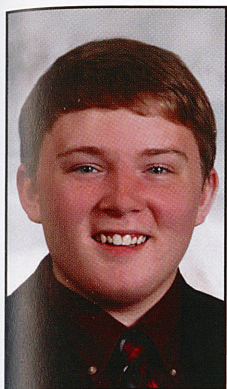

Katlyn Toth (12) had an easier choice.

"My dad teaches at WCCC so I can go there for free. Plus, they have a program in dental hygiene which is what I want to major in. I don't want to be in debt forever, and it's close to home."

"I'll probably go to Point Park University, but I'm also looking at Columbia in Chicago," Mikayla Rupp (12) said. Location seemed like an important deciding factor for Rupp.

"PPU has a good program for Sports/Art/Entertainment Management, and I like Pittsburgh. However, Columbia impresses me. Still, since I haven't toured Columbia yet, PPU is more likely to be my choice just because it's in my city," Rupp said.

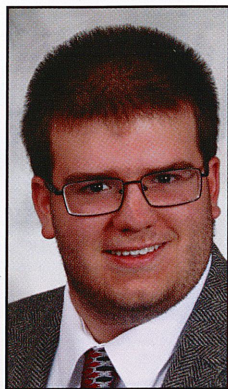

As an overall consensus, students began their search with schools close to home. From there, they branched off to find the best fit for their major of choice... with the huge price tag ever looming.

Seniors reveal personal distractions

The buzz of your cell phone. Harry Potter weekends on ABC Family. Temperatures well over 85 degrees in Mrs. Laero's room. Netflix Binge Sundays. Screaming on the bus ride home. In the form of a question, "What are things that distract you, Alex?"

A distraction common to hundreds of students at the school, Haley Stonebreaker (12) said, "My phone constantly distracts me. Regardless if I try to focus and set it aside, it's like it's calling my name. No matter what, I always have to check Instagram or Snapchat. Sometimes if I'm feeling really lame, I'll even check my e-mail."

Ryan Barclay (12) also disclosed what gained his attention. "Video games always keep me from thinking straight. When I come home from school, I want to relax and talk to my friends online. But, it's difficult when I have more important things I need to finish first," Barclay said.

Deep in her cowboy boot roots, Jenna Trybus (12) said, "I enjoy going somewhere quiet like my room. I like to turn on some country music because it helps me focus more. Country music soothes the soul."

Gillian Debick (12) had similar feelings about using music to focus. "I normally spread all my work out on my bed and listen to my Ed Sheeran Spotify playlist. I work until I get everything done," Debick said.

When it came time to cram for Mrs. Poleski's calc test or put the final edits on that senior paper, distractions happened daily.

BUZZ. I gotta answer that. BRB.

Tyler Worthing (12)

So... you think you want a job? In high school, having a job meant a lot; it provided quick cash, future insight into the real world, and an after-school commitment. Still, it sometimes involved tasks not so pleasurable. Three seniors revealed details about some of the most grotesque jobs around.

Jordan Laero (12), worked for his family's removal business. Laero smiled and said, "I really like working for my family. However, one of the nastiest things I've ever had to do was clean dead rats and old packaged food out of some lady's house. As ironic as it sounds, it was just so she could call the exterminator."

Certainly, working in the fast food industry required a lot of focus and agility, especially during the peak hours. However, sometimes it required a strong stomach.

Story:

An employee at a local restaurant, Jessica Ray (12), said with a grimace, "The grossest thing I've ever done at work was clean the bathrooms. This one time, there was feces everywhere, and I had to unclog the toilets. It was beyond disgusting."

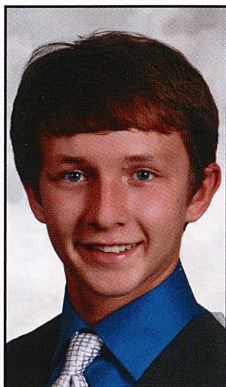

Another student discussed his seasonal part-time job working at Pounds Turkey Farm.

Nick Bono (11) said, "I was volunteered for the job by my mom. I was in charge of the butcher room, which unfortunately involved cleaning blood, fat, guts, and feathers off the floor."

Whether preparing for the exterminator or Thanksgiving dinner, every job held certain unpleasant tasks. Still, at least in this case, some seemed worse than others.

Senior Year

Do you remember those freshman jitters?

The start of freshman year brought on racing hearts, sweaty palms, and fearful expectations. Seniors recalled these nostalgic feelings all too well when reminded of their first memories as high schoolers.

As a naive freshman, Allie Uhing (12) struggled to learn the ropes of high school life. Uhing said, "I asked a teacher to point me toward my next class, only to find out that he was a student when I ended up in the wrong classroom."

"As I was walking to fourth period," Daija Head (12) said, "I dropped all of my things just as I crossed through the intersection in the 300 building. It seemed like it took forever to sort through the chaos. I was so late to my next class."

Jordan Laero (12) recalled valuable tips that stuck with him through the everyday difficulties of high school.

"A very wise senior advised me that I shouldn't be intimidated by anyone older than me. That gave me the confidence that I needed to survive the first day," Laero said.

Certain seniors found themselves haunted by ominous honors classes, even months before the first day of freshman year.

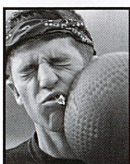

"I was so nervous when it came to turning in my summer assignments. I knew that the standards for freshman year would be set higher than in the middle school. I was so unfamiliar with the high school dynamic, and there was no telling what the year would bring academically," Mikayla Fuehrer (12) said.

Thinking back to your grade school years, what did you love doing the most at recess?

"I used to love playing with my jump rope. It was really big in Vandergrift. If you didn't jump rope with the girls, you weren't cool."
Cassitty Terrill (12)

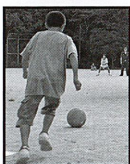

"We used to play tag or kickball. It was just a great time to go outside and burn off some energy."
Jason Bauman (12)

"There were so many games I loved. I liked kickball, double-dutch, hop-scotch, tag, wall-ball, and silent seat ball."
Lindsay Popovich (12)

"I went to Allegheny Hyde Park, Trevor Magness, Causton McCullough, and I used to love playing kickball all the time."

AP Calc and AP Chem students study hard

Smack! Junior year slapped everyone in the face. For students who had not yet begun thinking about their futures and looking into colleges, trade schools, or jobs, junior year served as a slight wake up call to do so.

Plenty of students piled on AP and Honors classes to get ahead of the game and prepare for college. For those students, junior year became a battle of time management. For two students, AP Calculus and AP Chemistry became the most notoriously difficult classes on their schedules.

Kylie Schafer (11) said, "I think AP Calculus is a more rigorous course. AP Chemistry is definitely more work, however. I want go into physical therapy, but I love math and science so I decided to take both. I am so nervous for the AP tests for college credit; they're going to be so hard!"

Students enrolled in both courses spent many long nights with a caffeine beverage and a difficult challenge.

Michael Kardos (11) said, "I took both classes to challenge myself. AP Calculus in my opinion is so much harder than AP Chemistry. In all honesty, it takes me about an hour and a half every night to do my homework. I'm just hoping to survive the year."

summer plans?

"I would be upset if she gave us a pop quiz because I don't like taking English tests."

After 182 days of last-minute cramming for tests, going out for pizza with friends instead of spending it online with everyone's best friend ALEKS, and your obvious duty to conquer Call of Duty: Black Ops III, you still found a way to make it through junior year.

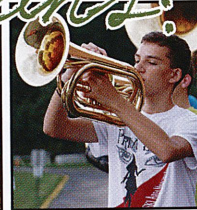

You deserve that one final summer before senior year. What do you look forward to this June, July, and August?

During her fifth period study hall, Taylor Craven (11) watches the X-Files on Netflix. "It's the type of thing where I won't watch TV for weeks straight, and then I'll binge watch Netflix for a whole day," Craven said. She created her account a little over a year ago.

"I had really bad anxiety about speaking in front of people and would not present at all. Still, I finally overcame that, and now I am a great public speaker."

gush about love for pets

"I have a German Shepherd/Border Collie mix. Her name is Ginger, and she's the sweetest dog you will ever meet. I can always count on Ginger to cheer me up."

Jeremy Weaver (11)

"I have a Corgi named Pooky with really tiny legs, and he's always there running around when I get home."

Nick Moglia (11)

"I have a big Lab named Lucky who is stinky, loud, and sometimes annoying, but I love him a lot. He's always there to cuddle whenever I've had a bad day."

Grace Larko (11)

Often regarded as beloved members of the family, pets offered unwavering loyalty and unconditional friendship. Dogs, cats, or in Cayley Shirley's (11) case, cherished chickens, all held a crucial rule in the everyday lives of students.

"I have an emotional connection with my seven chickens," Shirley said. "They're the friendliest animals I've ever had the pleasure of meeting."

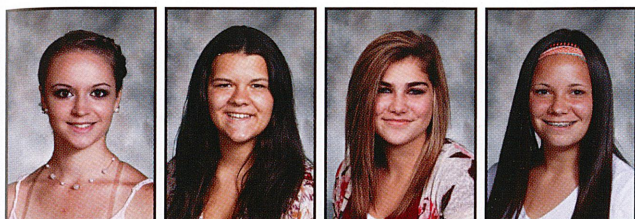

The constant loyalty of dogs cemented tight bonds with their masters, motivating pet owners to become the best friends they could for the pets. Willing to overlook the flaws of her two Pugs, Buttercup and Lily, Emily Cieslinski (11) explained that her fondness for her furry friends remained everlasting, despite the popular opinion of her own 'bestest' friends.

"Everyone thinks that my dogs are ugly. Their eyes point every which way, and their tongues hang down to the floor. But, I'll always love them," Cieslinski said.

Ariel Kline's (11) five not-so-friendly, felines meant the world to her, especially one. "Even though she hates me, I would chase a catnapper down the street for Georgette," Kline said.

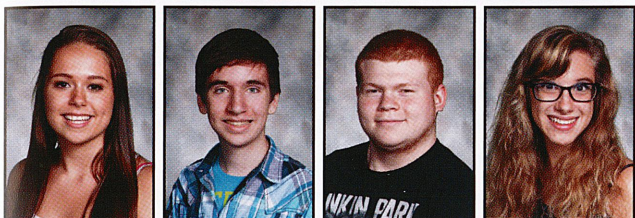

At the end of the day, pets provided a source of comfort and support. Holly Linder (11) said, "I'm lucky to have a pet that brightens my day whenever I'm sad. My dog Indy never fails to make me happy when I see her."

From 7:40 to 2:44 on Monday through Friday, the eight period students day found students trying to finish homework, learning new materials, and occasionally working in time to relax during study halls. With such an established routine, some juniors forgot to remember everything would change again at the end of the year.

Elizabeth Ellenberger (11) said, "It feels like just yesterday I was beginning my first color guard show with Dana and Josie, and now they're graduating. It's hard to imagine things without them because they've been there since day one. Plus, I can't believe that will be me next year."

The idea of losing close friends loomed over the heads of other juniors as well.

Lukas Prorok (11) said, "The majority of the people I hang out with are seniors, and we've been close since I was in seventh grade. It kind of sucks that they're all graduating this year, and I'm not. I am definitely going to miss having them around to hang out with all the time."

One junior offered his heartfelt comments on what he learned in football throughout the season. Johnathon Cravener (11) said, "I know that I have learned a lot from the seniors on the football team. They've shown me how I want to and should treat the underclassmen when I have the chance to be one of the seniors next season."

Discuss the most difficult item that you have given up for Lent.

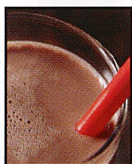

"By far, the single hardest thing I've ever given up for Lent is mac-and-cheese. I really love mac-and-cheese."

Natalie Travaglia (11)

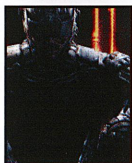

"One year when I was little, I gave up drinking chocolate milk because I thought it would be really challenging."

Tommy Starr (11)

"I gave up playing video games during Lent to help me focus on my work. I also gave up apple cider because I was addicted to it."

Brandon Stephens (11)

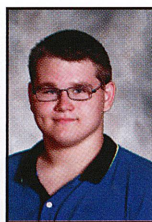

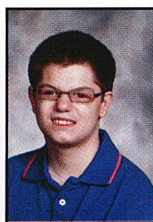

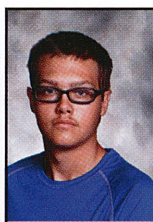

"Last year, I gave up popcorn for Lent. You have to give up something challenging, and I really thought popcorn was perfect."

bands on tour

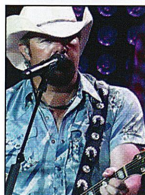

Between the contagious passion for the band on stage and the sound of everyone in the audience singing the words at the same time, the fact that these five students remembered their favorite concerts vividly should come as no surprise.

Kenny Chesney

"The best concert I have ever been to by far was the Kenny Chesney show. It was all about summer and making memories with good friends."

Morgan Rupert (11)

Toby Keith

"This past summer, I saw Toby Keith at the First Niagara Pavilion in Pittsburgh. I liked hearing his new songs while lying out on the lawn."

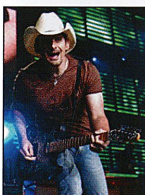

Charles Schachte (11)

August Burns Red

"I will never forget when I got to see August Burns Red live. Jake Luhrs is absolutely flawless and even winked at me."

Liz Ellenberger (11)

Brad Paisley

"My dad and I took a trip out to Hershey Park to see Brad Paisley perform. We were in the second row at the concert, and it was awesome because I never got to get that close at a concert before."

Holly Linder (11)

Luke Bryan

"Luke Bryan was the best concert I have ever attended. It was just the best part to my summer after a long year of school had ended."

Students search for spending money

"Gosh, I have no money to spend!" said Ana Cook (11) when asked where her hard-earned paycheck goes. "I work at the YMCA and the Vandergrift pool. I like it because I have a little spending money every so often. Still, since I work, I just get more frustrated when I don't have any money at all. Occasionally, it's difficult to enjoy my time spent working."

Stormie Fish (11) went on to agree with Cook's attitude toward her job. "Contrary to popular belief, Shop 'N Save is not 'just the right place to be', but I do benefit from the extra cash flow, even though I end up spending most of my money on other people. I really need to stop doing that."

Students without jobs had to find other sources for spending money.

"I just spend my parents' money, mostly on Kanye albums," said Danielle Shondelmeyer (11).

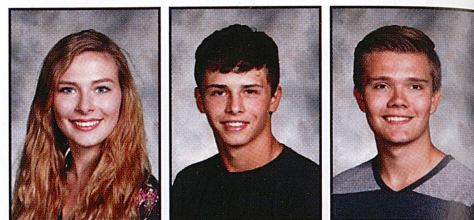

Several students attributed the majority of their spending to a voracious appetite.

"I waste all of my money on food, duh," Faith Gongaware (11) said.

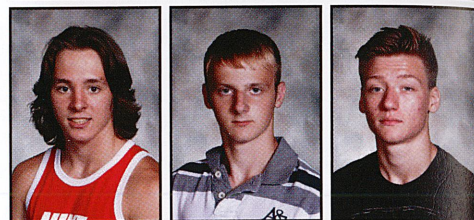

The close vicinity of fast food restaurants to the school when combined with a constant hunger for salty food lightened many wallets.

Hannah Patterson (11) said, "I'm probably the reason why the McDonalds across the street stays in business. I also go to the vending machine everyday to buy a Coke."

winterguard bruises

"I got the bruise from army crawling in a part of our show this year. I also hit it a bunch of times with my rifle while trying to learn new tosses."

Julianna Firek (10)

"I was army crawling across the floor for our Winterguard show entitled Battled Heart. I know for a fact that everyone on the guard has big bruises this year."

Riley Martin (10)

"This is what happens when you have to crawl around on a hard floor. The song is fast moving, so we really do get bruised up. Still, you get used to it after a while."

Brianna Scanga (10)

As doctors studied the long-term dangers of concussions, sports teams had to make adjustments to make their games safer. As a result of the research done on concussions, high school hockey jerseys adorned with stop sign patches above their number as a reminder not to hit from behind, mandatory concussion baseline tests, and the outlawing of all head-to-head hits in football all represented the changes in sports.

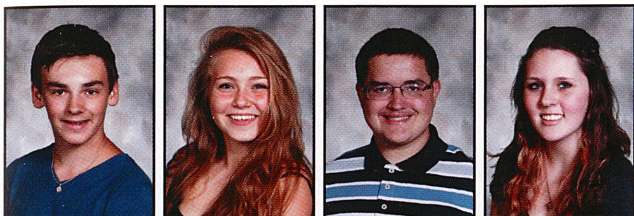

Even traditionally non-contact sports did not guarantee safety from concussions, as Ryan Smith (10) discovered. "I got my concussion by getting hit in the head with a baseball when I wasn't paying attention at practice. I absolutely hated it because I always had a constant headache and my vision was blurry. It was an awful feeling," Smith said.

Jesse Simindinger (10) also suffered from the major physical side effects of her concussion. "I got my concussion during softball when I slid into second base, tripped, and hit my head on the ground. The only thing I remember is running to second base and sitting up after I hit the ground. My experience was horrible. My eyes were blurry, I had severe headaches, and I couldn't say what my brain was thinking, which was very frustrating. It took me eight weeks to completely get back to normal again," Simindinger said.

Having to take a break from their sport to heal caused athletes additional pain.

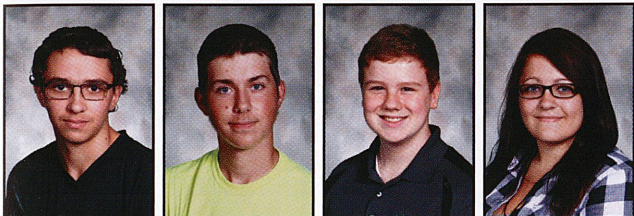

"I experienced my first concussion when I fell out of a stunt while cheering at a basketball game. After my accident, I immediately wanted to get back up and cheer again. So, it was very devastating when I found out that I had a concussion and couldn't cheer again for a long time. Luckily, I got cleared just in time to participate in tryouts again and made the cheering squad for this year," Angela Plazio (10) said.

Triplets discuss morning routine

After only a short twenty-nine week pregnancy, the Sames triplets arrived. Aidan, Bryan, and Colin Sames (10), named in alphabetical order and possessing one of the most fitting last names for triplets ever, spent their childhood sharing everything, as the boys seemed inseparable. At one point, Aidan and Bryan shared a room, and Colin and their younger brother shared a room, all using only one bathroom.

"When we were younger, if my Mom was really stressed or trying to get us ready at the same time, sometimes she would call us the wrong name. Now that we're older and we don't look alike as much, that doesn't really happen," Bryan said.

On whether the boys still had crazy morning routines, Colin shockingly thought not.

"I have a pretty typical routine," Colin said. "I wake up five minutes before the bus comes, get ready, and run out the door. We don't really run into each other."

Bryan agreed and said, "In the morning, we stay out of each other's ways. We all get ready at different times."

With such a full house, Aidan said, "We do butt heads whenever we are rushing to grab our breakfast or snacks for the day since we're all in the same space at once. We also fight sometimes whenever Bryan and I try to brush our teeth at the same time."

How do you typically get to school in the morning?

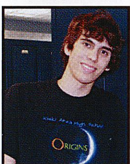

"I just take a twenty-minute bus ride to school every morning. While I'm on the bus, I just listen to my music or sleep."

Mia Hartman (10)

"I ride the bus to school every morning, but I don't like it. Everyone is too loud too early in the morning."

Jake Hanslik (10)

"This year, I go to school with my upperclassman friends. I hate going on the bus. It's always too bumpy in the mornings."

Sophie McDermott (10)

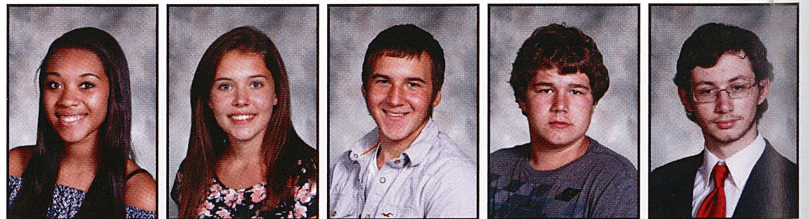

"To get to school every morning, I get on the bus. I don't hate it as much as others do. The bus is full, but it's only fifteen minutes every day."

Molly Ringwald's movies and Disney specials about teenagers turning 16 set very high expectations for students' Sweet 16. Although not everyone could magically find a significant other and learn a cheesy life lesson on their birthdays, these five students still managed to enjoy this milestone day.

For her 16th birthday, the Shirley family traveled to New York City to celebrate in Big Apple style. Olivia Shirley (10) said, "I was in New York at Joffrey Dance School for two weeks." Shirley enjoyed two free weekends with her roommates and new friends.

it just ballooned...

Posing behind a festive balloon in Giant Eagle, Bailey Ziencik (10) shows her excitement for her Sweet 16. "My mom and I planned the party at Primo Event Hall, and it definitely exceeded our expectations," Ziencik said. After having so much fun at her 16th birthday party, she decided to host another one the following year.

At Penn Quarter in Washington DC, Angela Koontz (10) takes in the huge video screen that encompasses the room. Koontz said, "For my 16th, Olivia Rimmel and I went to DC for YouTube's Playlist Live Convention. We had a blast." Everyone settled for Chinese food that evening, even though they originally had Italian cuisine intentions.

prepare to save the day

"I am applying to be a volunteer at the Saltsburg Firehall, but I used to volunteer at the one in Bell Township."

Jimmy Speedy (10)

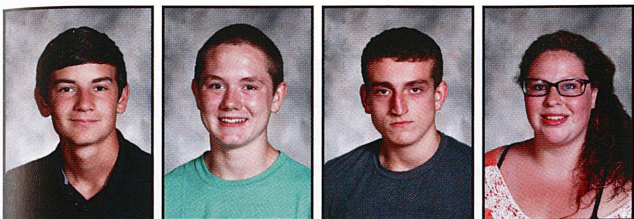

On too many mornings, a siren echoed throughout the fire hall while a rush of men and women prepared to save the day. The adrenaline ran through their veins as they focused on getting ready as quickly as possible... sliding into their uniforms... making sure they remembered their helmets... and lacing up their boots. This type of high-stakes, stressful, exciting environment did not suit all personalities, but a few sophomores felt as though it fit them just right, in hero fashion.

Commenting on why he volunteered, Austin Polka (10) said the job had its own unique rewards. "I have volunteered for Oklahoma Fire Department for about six months now. After a lot of thought, I joined because it seemed like it would be fun, all while helping others."

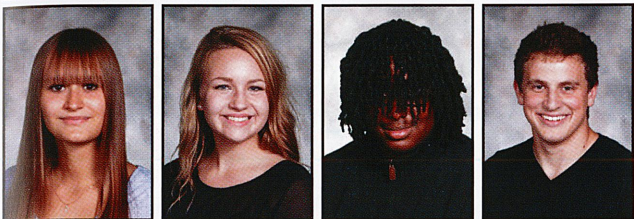

Roy Black (10), who volunteered at Washington Township Fire Department also said that he felt better after helping out. "It's nice because I'm giving back to my community, all while doing something that I like," Black said.

Black added, "I remember my first fire. It was a pretty big one; it was at night and the whole house was already on fire when we got there. We checked to see if anyone was in the house and if there were dangerous chemicals or anything. Then, we talked to the owner about what happened. I was really nervous, but my blood was pumping. I've been volunteering since I was 14, so it's been a part of my life for a while."

Freshmen forge through crowded study halls

What successful ways have you found to manage stress?

"My uncle owns a pipe yard about ten minutes away from my house. We will go and shoot guns there to relieve stress."

Jacob Hilty (9)

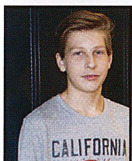

"I talk to my friends when I'm all stressed out. Also, I always do my best to help them out when they need me."

Kennedy Buccì (9)

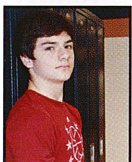

"I go to music when I'm all stressed out. I like listening to anything but country music."

John Lukas (9)

"I deal with stress by playing sports. When I'm stressed out, I'll go outside and shoot hoops or put a game on."

Jack Colecchi (9)

When students strolled into their study halls in the cafeteria and found themselves in the middle of over 100 other confused students, most wondered if they had gone to the wrong place. The yearbook staff conducted an experiment to find out whether new study halls held in the cafeteria with five times as many students and more teachers would improve students' productivity and grades.

Miranda Akerley (9) had to find somewhere else to go for study halls to avoid the distraction caused by the dull roar of so many students in one cafeteria.

"I usually leave to go to the library during my study hall because it's a lot quieter, and it makes me feel more productive," Akerley said.

Study hall distractions seemed unavoidable to freshmen, especially after having spent the last two years in middle school.

"When I go to study hall, I don't really do anything. When my teachers give us work, it's hard for me to concentrate because I get distracted by anything that is moving," Dominik Dellach (9) said.

"I have two study halls this year, which is pretty nice. Because it's freshman year, I don't have too much to do. Still, when I actually have work, my phone distracts me a lot, and my friends always bug me," Chad Kerchensky (9) said.

Sometimes the overwhelming amount of noise got to students, and they spent their time sleeping and eating.

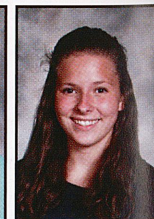

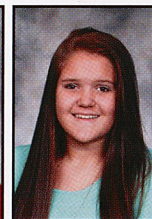

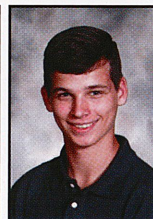

"During my study halls, I never seem to have a lot of homework, which gives me a free period to do anything I want. I usually decide to take a rest and sleep for a little," Taylor Lamison (9) said.

"I have two study halls this year, and I'm not that busy most of the time. So, I really enjoy just talking to my friends and eating food," Olivia Binunzio (9) said.

Freshman transition into high school life

The simplicity of navigating the rectangular layout of the middle school hallways vanished, and in its place stood the daunting back hallways and courtyards of the high school. In addition to the new difficulty of finding classes, students had to adjust to a larger student body roaming the hallways, more extensive homework, and making friends who could keep them sane during their first year of high school.

For Jenna Richardson (9), the stress prior to attending high school disappeared once she had a few days under her belt.

"I was really worried at first that I wouldn't adjust well, but once I started experiencing things, it became easier. Every day, I thought about strategies to get around the school better and how I could balance out cheering and also school work," Richardson said.

"It was hard to adjust with all of the new teachers and hard homework," Bailey Kush (9) said. "I knew I wanted to get good grades my freshman year so I went to my older friends and my parents for advice."

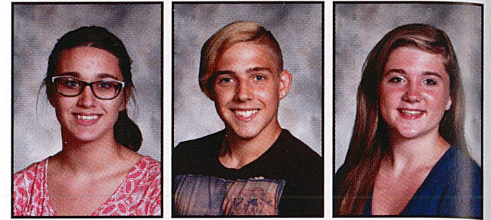

Some freshmen like Austin Schwarz (9) did not feel intimidated by the high school move.

"I didn't worry much about transitioning from the middle school as much as I thought I would. I tried my best not to stress myself out, and by the time freshman year came around, I was pretty much ready."

After getting a year under their belts, freshmen felt as though they had new wisdom to impart on the next incoming class. Color blind students talk about their daily struggles

story
E. DeBich (11)

"If I roll my wrists, I can crack them really loud."

Zoe Sluka told me that wasn't normal."

Jenna Shirley (9)

Guys had a higher likelihood of developing color blindness than girls did. Approximately eight percent of males worldwide possessed color blindness as a dominant trait, compared to roughly one percent of females. This gap between male and female happened because color blindness stemmed from the X-chromosome. Women needed both of their parents to have the gene, whereas men only needed one parent to pass on the trait.

Regardless of gender, color blind students united over the universal struggle to match their clothes. Color blind students did not always feel confident in their ability to avoid wearing a purple shirt with maroon pants, and found themselves asking their family whether or not something matched.

Maya Shick (9) ranted on the daily routine of getting dressed. "I honestly feel like everything I wear is mismatched," Shick said.

It came in different forms: red-green, yellow-blue, and it included different types of shade variations. A treatment for color blindness did not exist for people affected by it, no matter what variation they experienced.

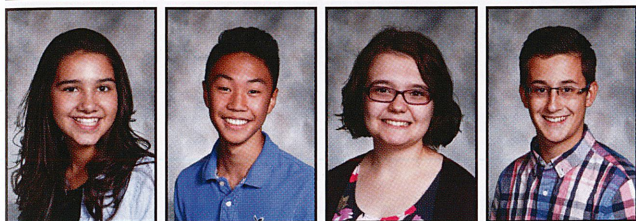

Dawson Shondelmyer (9) laughingly said, "I have trouble seeing darker colors, but for me, coloring books and color-coding things are a struggle."

On the other hand, living with color-blindness had interesting side effects.

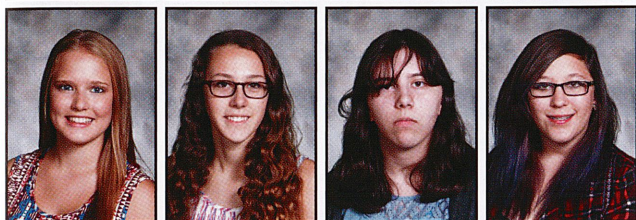

Jerod Keys (9) said, "I once bought a pair of shoes I thought were blue, but they were really purple. I found out I was color blind early on, probably in like second grade. Ever since then, I see it as more of an advantage. It allows me to see deer so much clearer in the woods when I'm hunting than the average person can."

Colorguard primps and preps for their show

After a long, grueling week filled with school, homework, and hours of practice, attending a full Saturday rehearsal still stood between colorguard and their next performance. The entire squad found themselves faced with the task of making their outward appearance match the over-the-top caliber of the performance about to unfold. It took a supply store worth of bobby pins, eyeliner, and hair spray to perfect the looks of each performer, and the end result made every one of them visible from even the highest of seats at a competition.

Haley Custer (9) said, "It usually took upward of a few hours to get ready, especially by the time we put all of the braids in and got a full face of stage makeup on. After being awake for so long on Saturdays, taking it all off seemed to take forever. The hair spray stuck around for a while after."

The importance of looking their best meant the colorguard had to enlist the help of their fellow teammates to get ready on time.

"We usually were on a pretty strict time crunch to get ready, but with the help of each other, we made sure we looked presentable—even if that meant doing last minute touch-ups on the bus ride to the competitions. Somehow, it always seemed to work out rather smoothly though," Brianna Scanga (10) said.

Although the creation and destruction of an original look every weekend seemed daunting, it all paid off when the band placed second in the nation in their AA class at Grand Nationals in Indianapolis.

To practice their parade moves on August 17, Mr. Traugh (fac) checks for proper marching feet technique. "Mr. Traugh always aspired for us to become our very best, and I think we did just that," Maggie Mullooly (10) said. The regiment placed second in their class at Bands of America Grand Nationals held in Indianapolis from November 12-14.

New Superintendent gets personal with vision/experiences

story:
E. Knehl (12)

military background

"I served in the 3rd US Infantry Honor Guard. We did full honors funerals for soldiers who qualified for them, and I also spent four years on active duty. However, since my father was career military, I actually say I put 20 years into the military between my father's service and mine. When people ask me where I'm from, I don't really have an answer since we moved around so much. However, being in the military was the start of my adult life. The four years I spent on active duty impacts my day to day life more than any other four-year period of my life."

thoughts on making the move

"I always think it's important to make yourself uncomfortable in the right ways; change can be good in that way. So, I'm glad I moved to Kiski and advanced in my career, even though doing so seemed like such a scary prospect. However, I will always miss my Southmoreland days; I was always in my comfort zone there."

goals for students

"Researchers like Paul Tough and Malcolm Gladwell have discovered a plethora of pop sociology findings that promote the same rhetoric that high school coaches and military personnel have focused on for years: you don't have to be the best; you just have to be good enough. Plenty of really talented people don't get anywhere because they can't compromise. I want our students to recognize that they have to learn team-related skills, all while working toward their full potentials."

tasks that matter most

"My job drags when I have to sit in my office and do 'stuff.' When I have a schedule that's packed full of projects, papers, and other routine items, I feel like I don't have something to look forward to during my day. The best part of my job is when I interact with other people on meaningful work. When I have big meetings with Mr. Roland and Mr. Smith, for example, my day goes much faster and feels so much more productive."

the american education system

"There's an old saying, If you're around long enough, the pendulum will swing back and hit you a second time. Well, I've been around long enough to remember when there were no standards concerning education. There really wasn't a way to tell if you were a good school or not. Now, the pendulum swings back, and we have so much accountability and a multitude of tests to determine how a school performs. It has created an entire industry unto itself to try and figure out the game, which takes the focus away from the actual education of students."

What's it like to work with your husband or wife?

Work... a place where staff and faculty spent most of their time, formed devoted friendships, and on occasion, even found their soulmates. While marriage in the workplace had the potential to bring about complications more often than not, according to the Pityks, Guzzies, and Schiratos, the pros far outweighed the cons.

"We save on gas by carpooling, but the biggest pro..." said Mrs. Guzzie with a sarcastic smirk on her face, "is seeing his smiling face almost every second of every day. However, it does sometimes annoy me when he constantly has to ask me for lunch money."

Mr. Guzzie, said, "It's nice that she's around when I get hungry...both for homemade snacks and money."

Likewise, Mr. and Mrs. Pityk showed signs of undying love for one another. "I definitely shouldn't say that there are any cons, but we carpool to work and eat lunch together sometimes. It's a lovely experience," Mr. Pityk said.

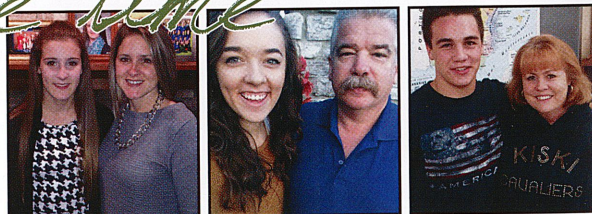

"Aside from carpooling to work, the best part about working with Mr. Pityk is dedicating our song, All of Me, to each other on GMK," Mrs. Pityk said.

Additionally, guidance secretary Mrs. Schirato offered her thoughts about working with her husband, Daniel, at the school.

"I loved riding to work together, eating lunch with him each day, and taking walks after lunch on the nice days," Schirato said.

Students eventually came to realize that their elementary school teachers didn't actually live at the school after each school day ended. Years later, to enlighten the student body even more, teachers revealed some interesting tidbits about their own lives.

Mr. Swanson (fac) said, "I'm sure most people don't know that I'm not a Pennsylvania native. I grew up near Detroit, Michigan and then moved to Texas for a while before I came to Pennsylvania. I think I'm done moving now. Now, who needs a coffee?"

Mr. Fiala (fac) recalled a rare time where he spoke to English Royalty.

"I talked to the Queen of England before," Fiala said. "I had a brief conversation with her about my student teaching experience when I taught in Plymouth, England for a little while. She was really nice, and I'll never forget it."

Mrs. DePanicis-Saxion (fac) said, "Many people would not have guessed that I was a telemarketer for Verizon at one point in my life. It was after I graduated from college, and I desperately needed the money. All I did was answer the phone and upgrade customers' phone services. I absolutely hated it."

One high school coach showed his affinity for a different sport. "The only thing people might not guess about me is that I played football in college," Mr. Culler (fac) said. "Here I am, a baseball coach, but that's not the only sport I enjoy watching and playing. Football was a big part of my life for a while."

Crabby Moments

liber
T. Craven (11)

The blaring of our alarms in the morning made us crabby the second we woke up. A few more minutes of sleep would make everything seem manageable, but with the time crunch caused by the bus schedule or the friend who always drove you to school, we knew we needed to roll out of bed and start getting ready. The freezing wind in our faces as we walked to the front doors of the school or the oppressive heat that made our sweat glands work overtime before we even officially started our morning symbolically represented all the little annoyances we would deal with that day.

Repetitive assignments aggravated us because we felt positive time spent doing something else, anything else, would have held more value.

Madeline Sulava (10) said, "There are days when Khan Academy really just gets under my skin. I'll have four questions done, I get one wrong, and have to start all over again. Not to mention, angles and triangles really annoy me."

Rushing through our assignments as quickly as we could in order to enjoy our time out of school before doing it all again next day topped our list of priorities.

Nicholas Lookabaugh (11) said, "Teachers that talk just to take up time really annoy me, it's just like giving us busy work. So, if we're just doing busy work, why is it such a crime to have a drink in class?"

Christian Fox (12) said, "I have a strict no-homework-out-of-school policy so when I'm not given ample time to complete it in school, it really ticks me off. Also, when did it become okay for teachers to just hand us more work when there's only five minutes left in class?"

A compilation of tiny everyday annoyances wore on even the most relaxed of students.

Tiffany Burkett (9) said, "I cannot stand when students talk when the teacher is talking. Most of the time when they are talking, they're just repeating the same jokes over and over again. The only thing worse than that is if someone is tapping their pencil or clicking a pen."

You've marched it for months and months, and you are second-best in the whole country for schools your size. Do your best to describe Origins and/or what it truly meant to you.

"As far as I know, the show was based on the beginning of the earth, how the pyramids were formed, and how aliens played a role in all of that. The orbs represented different ideas of how everything was created." CJ Thomas (12)

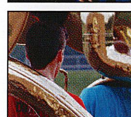

"Having the main solo in the ballad was both humbling and an honor. The contour of the music provided a special moment for many of the spectators and band members too." Dayne Auden (12)

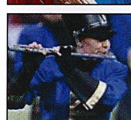

"The colorguard represented aliens on the field. The orange balls were to represent our home planets. That's why the guard pretty much stayed near the orbs throughout the whole show." Julianna Firek (10)

"I thought that the four orbs represented ideas given to early humanity by aliens. People used those gifts to create the pyramids and other structures in early history." Jewelia Rempuszewski (9)

"I think that the most magical moment in the show happened in the fifth movement when the show seemed to end. Instead, we all pulled out the tin whistles and let their notes ring throughout the dome in Indy." Colin Sames (10)

"The first time we stepped on the field in Indianapolis, I felt like six months of hard work was about to pay off, regardless of placement. I actually felt more confident there than on our home turf." Nicolette Fulton (9) early to rise...

Toward the end of the ballad, the band performs in Lucas Oil Stadium. "I was a little nervous having to play my alto sax solo in front of everyone. Still, once I played the first few notes, it all seemed to flow naturally," Dayne Auden (12) said. Drawing to go on early, the band got up at 4:30 AM to prepare for their Semis performance.

Band gives first/last performance

On that crisp Veterans Day evening, the night before the seasoned musicians left for Grand Nationals held in Lucas Oil Stadium in Indianapolis, band members executed a first and a last: Their first performance on the new football field and their last performance of their show in Pennsylvania.

After a five-year hiatus from BOA Grand Nationals and armed with Origins, the band placed second overall in their AA class. Drum Major Stephen Scassera (10) had mixed feelings about the send off.

"The new field behind the school set us up with a whole new environment. For the first time ever, we didn't have to load the trucks with our pit equipment and props to head to Vandergrift. It saved us a lot of time. It was sad to perform our show for the last time in front of the home crowd though."

Bass clarinet player Maggie Mullooly (10) agreed and said, "I remember a total calmness about the whole band just before we performed on the new field. It was so nice not having to worry about stepping in a huge rut or slipping on the mud at Davis Field for a change. The new turf will give us an equal playing field with all the other bands across the nation that never have to worry about mud puddles and slippery grass."

Tenor saxophone player Ethen Hammer (10) said, "That performance was actually the first and last time that my parents and siblings got to see the show. After we finished the last note, it dawned on me that the trip to Indy was really at our feet. We left 12 hours later down routes 66 and 70 toward the dome. We came home second best in our class for the whole country. Who can possibly complain about that?"

"My proudest moment was when I joined the marching band. I never knew the potential I had for playing an instrument. Joining changed my life and my perspective on playing."

Vo-tech offered an array of valuable skills. However, for some students, it became difficult to choose just one discipline, especially when they did not feel informed enough about all possible fields to make their decision. Four students from the welding class elaborated on how they narrowed down their options and made the choice to enter welding.

Kasee Martin (12) said, "My Dad used to weld in the garage, and I used to watch. Eventually, I wanted to help. It all began there."

The passion for welding often found its deep roots grounded in family. Dan Black (12) felt sparks fly the first time he watched his uncle and pap.

"Before entering Vo-tech, I had about three years of experience welding at the shop. I learned so much up at the farm with my uncle and my pap, welding with them," Black said.

Anchored in the skills and knowledge learned, soon-to-be graduates had bigger plans for the future.

"I want to join the Union, and I either want to be an iron-worker or a steam fitter. But, I really want to be a pipe-liner. The only bad thing is that it involves a lot of traveling," Black (12) said.

"I want to work on the pipelines, but that's after I go to trade school, possibly," Tyler May (12) said.

Welder Hunter Foy (12) wanted to attend both trade school and college because he felt it would help him to prepare as much as possible for his future.

"I like that I can earn certificates in Vo-tech. I want to go to college and major in welding, and then I want to go to another trade school," Foy said.

"While Ms. J. was really nice, I just felt that I would learn more with a whole day at the high school, giving more time to yearbook and my photography aspirations."

Theater class practices for performances

Blocking scenes could take ages. Running through lines again and again, adjusting facial expressions, working on that perfect delivery, and perfecting characters all required more than just one class period of work. The theater classes had prepared and practiced skits all semester to perform them in the building for their peers.

Angela Koontz (10) said, "My partner and I had a ton of fun preparing for our performance. However, it took a ton of work every day in class and at home. Memorizing and then acting out an entire script is not easy. The challenge in itself was half the fun though."

Getting on stage and immediately forgetting all of their lines seemed like the ultimate nightmare for theater kids.

Jenna Schindler (10) said, "Nerves play a great part in performing."

Memorizing is all about repetition. It was scary and frustrating when you have run your lines hundred times, but you still cannot remember them. In the end, after the performance went smoothly, it was fun and I felt accomplished and proud of myself."

The learning experience theater provided helped to make students feel more prepared for their acting futures.

Autumn Hockenberry (9) said, "Theater was a both wonderful and valuable experience. The most important part was that it helped me prepare for future auditions, musicals, and plays. Every little bit helps when it comes to acting, performing, and especially memorizing things."

The semester long class also featured improvisation techniques.

Busy schedules require making sacrifices

story
T. Craven (11)

Every high schooler knew the three key components of scholastic success; black coffee, breakdowns, and bloodshot eyes. Stress seemed inevitable for students who exerted every last bit of effort into their hectic routines, but their efforts seemed a small price to pay in pursuit of their personal goals.

Amanda Munzek (11) struggled with demanding practice schedules, but managed to survive her jam-packed day. "Swimming season is torturous. We wake up at 4:00 in the morning to be in the water by 5:15. Practice normally consists of swimming at least 5,800 yards in ice-cold water, and that's not the end of it. I have to go to school immediately afterward. I feel like I can't catch a break," Munzek said.

Despite having little to no time for themselves, some devoted every spare second to spending time with the people most important to them.

"Getting through the day is tough, especially because I'm involved in band. When that's mixed with endless amounts of schoolwork, it can be hard to relax, but I always make sure that I spend time with my brothers. When the pressure gets to me, I can count on them to bring a little joy into my life,"

Maggie Mullooly (10) said.

For Julie Shannon (11), her passion for the performing arts kept her on campus well after the last bell of the day, transforming the high school into a second home. "I'm always rushing from one practice to another. I like to be involved, but it's draining. Laying my head down on my pillow at two in the morning is such a relief. It makes me so happy I could cry."

"I was proud to make it through the normal school year grind with studying and homework, while still having time for extra activities."

PJ project lets students wear their work

Story
A. Grimm (10)

Buying clothes at the store allowed students to build their own wardrobes and express their creativity through their choices. However, in the Fashion and Design classes, the creativity went a step farther because the students made their clothes from scratch.

Stephanie Conklin (12) explained her favorite project while she took Fashion and Design. "Personally, I enjoyed making the pajama pants because you can use them every day. I thought they were very easy to make, and I had a great time learning how to create them. I hope to take my learning experiences and make clothes in the future."

The idea of making decisions about how to design clothes appealed to Erin Tumas (10) as well.

"My favorite project is probably the pajama pants. I thought they were a fun challenge, and they are very comfortable to wear. I love knowing that I've made something I can actually wear, and I am very happy with the way they turned out."

Fashion and Design helped students to feel accomplished about their projects that usually served a purpose in everyday life.

Alexis Soddors (10) explained her feelings about taking the elective.

"When it comes to Fashion and Design, I love the environment of the room. It is a very laid back class and is very relaxing, too. I have taken it for a couple years now, and I've had so much fun creating projects with my friends. It will always be one of my favorite electives, and I encourage everyone to take part in it," Soddors said.

New labs help confused students

The "Ding-ding-ding" of the bell to signal the end of class echoed in students' heads as they tried to process the information displayed all over the board. They knew that without understanding the concept they had just learned, whether in math, science, or English, any homework would result in wild guesses, not a deepening in their understanding of the lesson. To end the struggle, "Labs" for science, math, and literature formed throughout the school.

Cole Miller (11) said, "One day before a test, my teacher wasn't at school, and I was still struggling. I went down to the math lab, and Mrs. Hald explained everything to me. I ended up doing really well on the test."

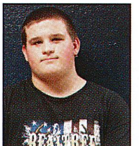

At least one teacher from each specific subject monitored each lab most periods of the day. These teachers offered specific help to students who sought assistance.

Nicholas Chrimes (12) said, "I have my study hall in the literature lab. It's a really good place to be during my free period because if I need any help in English, there's always a teacher there. It was especially useful when I was writing college essays and applying. There's always a lot of kids coming down for help, and it seems like its effective."

Carpentry students embrace out-of-class projects

L. Debiak (11)

During the course of the year, carpentry students offered up their talents in an effort to aid the sports program at the school. Ranging from building dugouts for the baseball and softball teams to on-the-job tasks, the woodworkers enrolled in Woodworking at Tech gained valuable skills in their trade.

Kenneth Bonelli (12) said, "I've helped with quite a few remodeling and finishing jobs. I also have worked on the dugouts here at Kiski. The innovative architecture on the show Treehouse Masters inspires me so much when I'm on the job."

Family and friends sometimes provided a source of inspiration. Building, fixing, and creating master devices seemed natural for one student.

Philip Evans (12) said, "My dad has showed me a lot in the way of building and fixing things; he really inspires me. One time, I helped build a deck that still stands as the coolest thing I've done outside of Vo-tech. One day, I hope to own my own business."

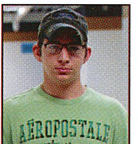

Given that tenth grade became the first year students could join Vo-tech, new students started jumping head first into out-of-school projects.

Shayne McGranahan (10) said, "I just started Vo-tech this year, but I plan on going to Apollo to start looking into housing projects. I like carpentry because it gives me something to fall back on. Plus, there is also a demand for workers."

Student athletes give best effort every practice

story:
A. Koontz (10)

Student athletes felt the heat as they pushed through their workouts day after day. Every individual had something that motivated them to complete a workout.

Jayne Hohman (12) said, "There are days when I don't want to run, but Lindsey Caldwell is usually pretty good at getting my attention and doing a dance that cheers me up that motivates me to get started on one of our really difficult days at track."

Having a set goal for the end of a workout proved a stronger motivation for some students.

"I try as hard as I can to work out every weekday. I don't really mind most workouts, but I like either back or leg days the best out of all of them. It makes it a lot easier to get through when I know I have a protein shake waiting for me when I'm done," Alexander Delp (12) said.

All of the motivational workout quotes on the Internet could not always get students excited about feeling the burn during their workouts.

Hohman said, "We do something we call the Big K at some of our practices where we run the 1200, then a mile, then the 800, then a mile, then the 400, and then another mile. Our legs are always dead by the end of it."

Difficult math concepts puzzle students

For some students, math notes seemed written in Greek. This phenomena may have meant the students had just completed a lesson on differentiations, which use the Greek letter delta, but it more likely signified that they felt utterly perplexed about a new concept.

"The hardest part about Calculus so far was the chain rule. It had so many rules already and then whenever we added in trig functions with like inverse sine it made it even more complicated," Alec Eshenbaugh (12) said.

Sometimes the sheer amount of information presented in a class seemed to pose the biggest problem.

Cassie DeLuce (12) said, "In AP Stats the hardest thing we have to do so far was preparing for the midterm. We learned so much already, and it's so time consuming trying to remember everything."

In order to fully understand the concepts presented, students had to add extra study time into the equation.

"I wasn't really understanding parabolas in class, so I went to the math lab and Mrs. Cortazzo showed me a different way that made me understand it," said Parker Koontz (9).

Teachers that explained topics in a variety of ways had the ability to make all the difference in the world.

Taylor Love (10) said, "Geometry always makes sense relatively quickly because Mr. Fantaski always explains things in the simplest way possible. The notes we get coordinate right along with the homework which helps because whenever I have a question, I can usually answer it myself straight from the notes."

Re-choired Christmas concerts set festive tones

story
T. Craven (11)

From the time choir members stepped into the chorus room back in August, they hummed the cheerful melodies of timeless holiday classics for months, all in preparation for their annual Christmas concert. Without resistance, students embraced the early start of the season.

"I enjoy the music that Mrs. Hampshire chooses each year, and although it's challenging at times, it never fails to lift the spirits of the choir. We are always eager to start the holiday off on a good note," Brandon Colaianne (11) said.

In addition to singing, students in the choir also had the opportunity to assume a role as an accompanist. Georgia Schafer (10) found the position challenging, but enjoyable.

"Playing with the choir always helps the performance because it allows Mrs. Hampshire to conduct us. It's important that we stay on track, especially during our winter concert," Schafer said. She added that her favorite piece of the holiday show was No Time to Diet. "The comical nature of the song really captured the attention of the audience members, and that always adds to the excitement."

Despite the constant efforts each group put forth, some choirs went the extra mile to spread joy to those who needed it most. In early December, members of KAndescence Show Choir traveled to Pleasant Ridge Care Facility to perform for residents.

"Putting on a show at a nursing home is really rewarding, especially during the holidays," Katie Gress (11) said. "The people are so appreciative and full of energy. Everyone was glad to give back to them at Christmas."

Story:
E. Deblich (11)

Daydreams about traveling usually involved walking through romantic streets, sipping amazing coffee, and meeting attractive European singles. None of these daydreams included bad airplane food, debilitating jet lag, or other traveling mishaps, but they happened to the following students anyway.

Ariel Kline (11) endured minor set backs while traveling the world.

"I have traveled quite a few places including France, England, Canada, and Mexico. I love flying and usually read books or sleep on the plane, but airplane food will forever remain disgusting," Kline said.

Riding on a plane scared some and even had side effects that students did not expect.

Abra Gold (11) said, "After arriving in Germany, I had the worst jet lag. I spent the next day lying on the floor butchering how to read my cousin's German flashcards. In my state of delusion, I also almost burned her while straightening her hair."

Still, a harrowing, 16-hour plane trip to China may have caused the most suffering of all for one traveler.

Techers discuss the importance of precision

Students of Vo-tech practiced means to perfection nearly every day. Programs ranging from Cosmetology to Carpentry all shared at least one common theme: all areas of study required students to measure precisely and accurately.

Emily Hooper (10) said, "It is vital to correctly measure out every cut when styling hair, and keeping your workspace clean is a must. That way, clients remain thoroughly satisfied and will come back again." She further said, "I love going to Vo-tech instead of filling my schedule with credits that do not mean as much to me."

"Brandon Meanor (10) said, "Since I go for carpentry, being exact is about more than a grade. I have to make sure all measurements are correct and everything fits together and works as it's supposed to."

The meticulous mindset branched into other arenas at Tech, also. Masonry required straight lines and precision in order to make a wall stable.

"Accuracy is important because you don't want to lay your wall crooked. It's amazing how one-eighth of an inch off on one end can cause the other end to be totally out of whack and unstable," Roy Black (10) said.

Cooking and art inspires students

The moment Mr. Fabrizi (fac) mentioned all the cooking the life skills students had done throughout the year, Matthew Guyer (12) said, "I love all the cooking we do in class. A few days ago, we made smoothies. That was my favorite thing I did all year."

The students' passion for cooking did not take away from their love for art.

"I'm In Art II this year, and it's my favorite class because someday I really want to do something like Graphic Design. We have been working on sketching out licence plates in class.

Soon, we should be making them out of copper. Mine is going to be a New Jersey license plate because I would really like to move there one day," Timmy Miller (12) said.

Other projects involved experimenting with various techniques.

Paul Pillart (11) said, "Right now in Art class, we have been working on different ways to shade using colored pencils. We did a project where we shaded the first box, then we shaded another box and put marker on top of the pencil. It looked really awesome when I was done with it."

The creativity seemed to never end, as Kasey Mancerella (10) said, "I'm in Mr. Yuhasz's Art class so I got to do this really cool sketch of my hands. We used pencil to trace them and then filled them in."

"I would say my proudest moment would be when I accepted God into my life. I have definitely changed ever since."

Mr. Williamson's classes turn heads

Every semester, a week came when the school went wild. Students lied on the floor, walked backward through the halls, and refused to make eye contact while talking to anyone. Clown costumes, prom queens, and nurses roamed the halls that week. Freshmen walked around uncertain of what had transformed their classmates into new people who would come up to them to take selfies or seemingly eat mayonnaise with a spoon straight from the jar. The more experienced students had already learned the secret: social norms week had come.

Sociology teacher Mr. Williamson (fac) created the social norms assignment to show students just how much their daily lives followed societal cues. Students could do anything outside of normal societal behaviors as long as no one ended up embarrassed or in danger. Featured here, he picked eight of his favorites from the bunch.

With three laps left around the cross-country course, with ten minutes left in the soccer game, or with one final event left at a swim meet, the mental battle began. Lying down, taking a nap, and resting our muscles seemed so tempting. However, then we remembered that 1—we had reached an age where naptime no longer applied, 2—the game, match, or meet had not ended, or 3—we would not let this moment define us. Moments that mattered most included watching the crowd scream as the fourth quarter wound down before a winning football game, the deafening noise of the buzzer after a goal scored in a hockey game, and finishing a race only to feel our muscles still protesting from the effort—and nothing less.

Wrestler Logan Pollick (10) said, "The most defining moment for me was going to Hershey for team states. It was fun to be running out with your team every time. We definitely want to go back so we're going to work hard over the offseason as a team. Our boys really came together as we wrestled harder teams, especially during our first matches against Cumberland Valley and Nazareth because everyone had to give everything they had."

Pride in our teams made even individual victories sweeter.

"Being able to travel to Hershey and watch Megan Aller place at the state meet was inspiring to me because every day, we go through some of the toughest workouts and the longest runs, and it's so great seeing it all pay off for her. All the runs that the whole team pushed her on to help her become a better runner were just important to us when we got to see her succeed at that level," Lindsey Caldwell (12) said.

Close bonds also helped us feel more confident in our own ability as a member of the team. Nick Smith (9), a backup goalie for the soccer team, explained how this affected him firsthand.

"As as a team, we were very close like a family, and everyone believed in me as a freshman to come in and fill in for Seggy. That was a confidence booster for me. It meant even more when Nick Bisceglia and Ethan Joyner thought I could handle going in during a playoff game because we are always practicing together. Knowing that they thought I could handle this made me feel like I could. Now that I have experienced going into a game like that, I know I'll be able to handle high pressure situations in the future," Nick Smith (9) said.

In a match against formal rival Burrell, Noah Levett (10) executes a shooting shot in an attempt to pin Danny McCarthy (9). "It was a tough competition, but it was a good match," Levett said. The boys defeated Burrell 45-12.

Team goes from winless to playoffs and explains why

As the announcement blared through the loudspeakers, the team thundered through the banner with a mission to complete. The seconds ticked down one by one on the scoreboard and suddenly, with the sound of a buzzer, another football season commenced.

Numbers and records from last year served as motivation to outdo themselves the following season long before the first game night.

Cam Turner (12) said, "We went into the season wanting to work even harder than before; we wanted to be better." The will to do better became evident as the team spent months exemplifying dedication and relentless drive.

In order to improve as a team, each individual had to conquer their own goals.

Johnathon Cravener (11) said, "We ran the four corners of the field and practiced a ton, but it's all about proving to yourself that you're better than the year before, that you have somehow improved yourself so you can put all of that effort into the team." Pushing through tough practices and frustrations would prove itself worthy it as the games began in the fall.

The football team felt the weight of the entire school as they stepped on to Davis Field once again. As the season progressed, the student section came out in full force every single weekend.

Turner said, "We loved playing for the student section, it was awesome to see how many people showed up every game. Also, we went from a winless season to the playoffs. That's pretty darn good."

ready to rumble...

With his pink socks to support Susan G. Komen for a Cure, Marques Lindsey (11) breaks through the banner. "Ripping through the banner sets the tone for each game and lets our opponents know that we're ready to battle," Lindsey said. He played defensive tackle for the team and made Second Team All-Conference on the season.

on the flipside...

Scrambling under pressure, Chad Kuhn (12) flips over Norwin opponent Kyle Turcovsky (11) without hesitation. "Every Friday night is special. However, when it comes to playoff games, it's totally different. Our attitudes are still positive like always, but we know that we have to win to be able to still play another game together." After losing this game and a winless season last year, the team still made playoffs in the fall.

veteran advice

"The team needs to not take anything lightly and work as hard as they can, every chance that they get. They only get one shot to make playoffs, and every game is a must win. It's better to have given your all than to have regrets."

Mike Iacovino (12)

"In my opinion, the team needs to constantly improve on their stamina. It's tough playing both defense and offense all the time. What you do in practice sets you up for what you do in the heat of the game. Every rep in practice matters."

DeShawn Bracy (12)

make the grade

"Don't let one bad season define your career. If you find a mistake, do all you can to fix it and move forward. It is so important that you show up to practice every day willing to get better and improve every aspect of the game."

Chad Kuhn (12)

"Throughout my years, I have found it most important to keep your grades up, even when things get tough. Also, hit the weights in the gym to get yourself stronger. Lastly, but just as important, always come to practice."

Jon Bracy (11)

down by a foot...

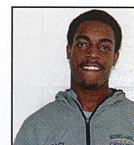

In the first half of the game against Altoona, Lincoln Clayton (12) takes down Josh Russo (11). "The game against Altoona was one of the more fun games we've played because we were winning the whole game," Clayton said. Clayton planned to attend IUP, Slippery Rock, or Shippensburg on a football scholarship.

what's the score?

After scoring a touchdown in the playoff game against Bethel Park, Tariq Gant (12) looks at the scoreboard. "Next year is going to be so different because I won't be able to keep playing with my boys. This team is special, and I will miss it the most." Before his move into the district, Gant had little experience playing football.

"One of my proudest moment was whenever my ninth grade coach asked me to play QB in the season."

Squad members recall what mattered most

On game days, cheerleaders strolled through the hallways in their clean white Nike shoes with their hair pulled back in sequined navy and gold bows, readjusting their cropped tops as they walked.

The amount of time Katie Perroz (12) put into cheer meant she could do the cheers in her sleep, but it also meant she had spent so many hours with her team that she had made too many memories to count.

"Within my four years of cheerleading, the best part of it all was the friendships I have made.

Being one of our squad's captains has also taught me leadership skills and how to be more outgoing. I will never forget the fun cheerleading memories I have had over the years and cannot wait to finish out my last season with my friends," Perroz said.

"I enjoyed being with my closest friends the most over the past four years," Jenna Trybus (12) said. "We all have different personalities and unique characteristics that make our squad a family. We all work together and get the job of looking our best on and off the field done."

Haley Stonebraker (12) also agreed that it would be the girls she cheered with that she would remember.

Stonebraker said, "I was fortunate enough to cheer alongside my best friends for over four years, and we never noticed how close we've become until we realized how little time we have left as cheerleaders. I will cherish the memories that I've made with my squad forever."

cheers to the memories...

On October 1 at Davis Field, Alaina Schwarz (12) walks through the line of cheerleaders and soccer players for senior night. "That senior night was so special because I finally realized that this was my last year cheering, and I cherish all of the memories I've made throughout the years," Schwarz said. Schwarz started cheering for the school in seventh grade.

always that extra effort...

The cheerleaders made numerous signs over the summer. The banners hung around the school in support of all the fall and winter sports teams. The football banners disappeared from the walls one by one as they served the purpose of marking the start of every Friday night football game.

cause for celebration...

After the student section leaps over the wall to celebrate with the football players, the cheerleaders jump with their pom poms, joining the huddle. "We had to finish our whole cheer before we could storm the field with them, so we were late to the huddle," Bailey Zienick (10) said. The student section caused a penalty at one game for storming the field before the time ran out.

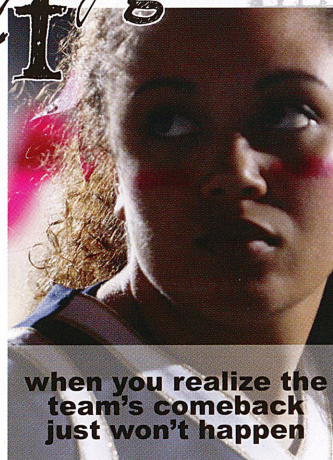

moving up...

To open the Homecoming Assembly, the Varsity squad performs their dance with three replacement cheerleaders from Junior Varsity. "It was a familiar environment cheering with past squad members," Alexis Soddors (10) said. Soddors cheered competitively in Louisiana before moving to Pennsylvania.

"I think it matters the most whenever the team is down points, and you need to get the student section pumped back up."	"It matters all the time. We try our hardest and give a full 100% because we care about the teams, students, and our squad."

In what type of moments do you think your efforts matter most?

"The proudest moment I have ever experienced was when I became a cheerleader for 7th grade. I had never been in a dance or gymnastics class prior and did not think that I would make it."

Golf team discusses fondness for each other

Although golf matches did not have student sections decked out in themed clothing, the members of the golf teams found their own fan section in their team. The girls varsity team consisted of eight members, and the boys fielded both a junior varsity and a varsity team. The girls team participated in a two-year probation period since they could not field a team in the past.

Jacob Firek (12) said, "On senior night, we all went to the course early and brought lawn chairs. We listened to music and talked about memories from previous years. The lineup was all seniors and it was our last time golfing together as a team." Firek's younger sister played on the varsity girls golf team.

Julianna Firek (10) said, "The best part about girls golf was Coach Dave's ridiculous games at practice. A funny thing happened to me once at a match; my drive was so bad it landed on a wooden bridge, and I had to take out my putter to hit it off." The girls golf team improved drastically throughout the season since over half of the eight female athletes hadn't played the year before.

Hallie Zidek (10) said, "I had only been golfing a few months before the season started. Most of us started out bad, but we worked hard and it was rewarding seeing our progress as a team. One of the funniest things that happened was when Julianna and Hannah called Aubry because they were locked inside the locker room before a match."

After graduation, Luciano will attend Wheeling Jesuit University to play both golf and baseball.

Down and dirty...

On the third hole, Tim Collins (12) gets up close as he reads the green. "I love being on the golf team with all my friends. The guys help me become a better player and also a better employee for my job," Collins said. Collins had worked as a golf caddy at Oakmont Country Club for three years.

Players
respond coaching approach

Late nights, sore muscles, tough losses, and lots of passion involved one thing: high school softball. The spring softball team underwent some major changes when the coaching staff changed. The softball team itself shrank while its staff increased.

Courtney Andree (11) said, "In previous years, there were two teams, a JV team and a varsity team. Last year, the new coaches decided to have one big team. We also had one coach in the previous years, but last year, we had four." The four coaches for the team all had different jobs which helped to organize things, improve on weaknesses, and get everything done efficiently.

"I thought it was a really good opportunity for the new players to learn from the older players because we all practiced and went to games together," Andree said.

Having a new staff meant that each coach brought something different to the table. Ms. Jones served as the head coach; Mrs. Garlick handled the pitching, outfield, and running; Mrs. Eichner aided in batting; and Coach Kim kept the team's character in check.

Kelsey Sofaly (10) said, "I think the new coaches improved our team because they really focused on skills and team building exercises. I think those exercises really brought us closer together as a team."

The formation of the new team meant the coaches could focus more on emphasizing the relationships between teammates.

Jesse Simendinger (10), said "Last year, having a character coach was a different experience. It helped us bond as a team. Once a week, we did exercises like puzzles so we could work together better. We also watched movies as a team so we could bond and become closer."

they need me...

Ready to deliver her wind up, Erin Weaver (10) thinks of the whole team counting on her. "I was not expecting to be the only pitcher at the beginning of the season. It was stressful at times because if I was hurting, nobody could replace me," Weaver said.

Jamilyn Dykes (10)

"We played one of our best games of the season against Penn Trafford. It meant the world because they are at the top of our section. We had to play up to their level, which only made us play better."

Alex Graf (11)

With intense focus, Haley Bertges (12) steps up to home plate. "I was looking down the third base line at my coach to see how she wanted me to hit the ball," Bertges said. The coach gave either a signal to hit, bunt, or slap the ball.

"My proudest moment was when I hit a home run in softball during a tournament. I cleared the bases with two people on, and we won the game."

Student trainers discuss numerous tasks

Ice, ice, and more ice. Student athletic trainers' hands went numb as they scooped out countless bags of ice, sucking the air out of the bags so they could be taped onto injured players. Cold fingertips served as a testament to how devoted the students remained to their jobs. Along with the two staffed trainers, a multitude of students took on the role of student athletic trainer.

Paige Lane (10) said, "Training is a great learning experience because we have to work with each other and all of the members of the sports teams. We keep things running smoothly and always have to be alert so we know when injuries happen. Student athletic training is also a great thing to be a part of because of all the relationships we get to build and the friends we make."

Hectic sports schedules meant more than two teams could have games or practices at the same time. The two certified trainers on staff could not oversee every event, which meant the students sometimes had to step in and take responsibility for an entire team. The students also did most of the prep work for practices, which involved getting six gallons of ice, ten gallons of water, and dozens of Gatorade bottles ready to go.

Anastasia Pearson (10) said, "I train because of the medical knowledge I gain that will definitely help me in my future. The student trainers and staff were all really close. We even had a Secret Santa for Christmas. Training was an amazing experience."

Releasing air from an ice bag to ensure its perfect fit, Trainer Matt preps it for wrestler Tyler Worthing's (12) shoulder. "Training takes up a lot of time, but worth it in the long run," Lily Gongaware (12) said. Over the years, Gongaware prepared ice bags for wrestling, football, and baseball.

Seagriff started training in ninth grade when her brother played as a senior on the football team.

"We use stretchy tape to secure ankles and wrists to prevent injuries."

brotherly love

The game takes two things: teamwork and talent

The sound of shoes squeaking against the floor echoed throughout the gym, and sweat dripped from the boys' heads while they gathered in a huddle. The team leaned in to form a plan to take on the opposing tribe. Together, they bonded and worked as one to get the job done. Still, those close relationships that the varsity basketball players formed with each other created more than friendships; it built a better team.

A pair of brothers on the team elaborated on how it helped their skills. Jon Bracy (11) said, "DeShawon is my role model on the team. He's someone who I can challenge but not feel pressured by. I know how he plays so I'm better at guessing his next move. With the other boys, they're my close friends, and I think it really makes us a better team."

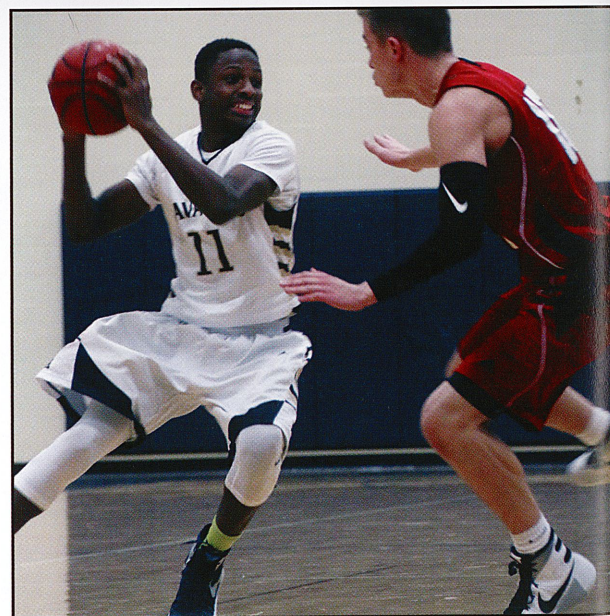

Jon preferred playing with a closely-knit team, while DeShawon Bracy (12) claimed that playing with his close friends never affected his playing.

"I love my teammates, but I never really thought that playing with the guys made me play stronger. I like playing with Jon because I like having that relationship with him. Still, you either have the talent or you don't; it's about working hard and having the skill. No amount of another player's work makes me personally better. I think it's about knowing how your own personal talent works with other players," DeShawon said.

gotta dive deeper

What does it take to improve?

Story: T. Craven (11)

Perched atop the block, swimmers took their marks, drew one last breath, and launched themselves toward victory. Each second felt like an eternity, but with every stroke, competitors challenged their capabilities. Finally, once reaching the finish line with chests heaving, they found chlorine-flavored success.

Still, athletes seldom achieved goals without focus and inspiration.

"Hard work landed me in the position of team captain this year," Paris Krug (12) said. "I try to lead the team, all while improving my own skills."

Although Krug held impressive times of 58.85 in 100 back, and 53.05 in 100 free, she strived to better her standings in preparation for the upcoming WPIALs. "I focus most of my energy on fine-tuning my under-waters and turns. It's the small things that really count in the end."

Josh Madzy (10) possessed the same attitude. "I've been swimming for ten years, and although I have made a lot of progress, there's still room to better myself. Normally, I begin to work on my times just before big meets. At WPIALs one year, I cut ten seconds off my 500 free. That's probably one of my most dramatic improvements."

Team manager Stormie Fish (12) noticed personal growth of the team as a whole. "Keeping track of times is one of my responsibilities. I try to support the swimmers, and it's great to watch them get better every day."

up for air...

In the meet against Burrell, Meredith Pepka (9) catches a quick breath in the 100-yard freestyle. "For the amount of members on Burrell's team, they do pretty well. Since we know most of the swimmers, it's always fun to go against them." The home team won the event.

off the board...

Amidst a front double-somersault, Brandon Stephens (11) braces himself for the water. "Diving is pretty hard because there is a lot of technique. You have to worry about height and distance from the board, as well as performing the dive, all while maintaining form," Stephens said. Last season, Stephens attempted diving for the first time and planned to work for a WPIAL spot in the current season.

"Knowing that the more I practice, the better I become helps motivate me to get up early in the morning. After practice, I usually rinse off, go to my locker, and head to room 211 for QRT."

Jordan Michelli (10)

"I usually go to bed around 12:30. That means that I get about four hours of sleep. Being in the pool for an hour and a half does kind of wake me up for the rest of the day. Still, I'd rather sleep in more."

Starting for the 100 breast stroke, Letizia Collini (12) uses the block to propel herself into the water. "My start is one of the best parts of my race. I love going off the blocks," Collini said. She finished first in her heat for the event.

"My relay team of Jordyn Palla, Letizia Collini, and Paris Krug had accomplished what we wanted when we broke the school record."

Hoops interest grounded in childhood memories

With a minute left on the clock, the high-top of a champion squeaked down the court. Gripping the rugged, orange skin of the ball, she wiped her sweat-covered brow before making the winning shot. The spectators erupted in cheer, and finally, years of effort proved well worth it.

It all started years ago with an old basketball hoop and games of H-O-R-S-E in the driveway, while pickup games with neighborhood friends led to scholarships, and for some, successful careers.

Childhood influences led three girls to find love in the form of an orange ball.

Sarah Heavner (10) said smiling, "As a kid, I remember watching the NBA a lot. No one in my family was really big into basketball. I joined at first just to get in shape, but after a while, I fell in love with the game and started to take it seriously."

Location also proved a factor in choosing the sport. Shelby Greece (12) said, "When I lived in Leechburg, we always started pick up games because we all lived so close. My brother and I grew up going to basketball camps and playing in the backyard. He's probably the reason I got back into basketball."

Sibling rivalries fueled profound interest in the game as well. "I grew up with a basketball hoop in my backyard and loved playing. I've played eight years, and I'll always remember my brother beating me all the time. I guess he just drove me to be more competitive," Jen Anderson(11) said.

In the second quarter in the game versus Armstrong, Emily Cieslinski (11) looks beyond #24 Taylor Wolfe (12) to pass the ball. Cieslinski said, "When given the chance, I like to pass to Mallory. She's good at blocking out the defenders to get the shot off."

On a breakaway up the court, Santana Lewis (9) escapes from Armstrong's Abbey DiGregorio (11). Lewis said, "The newly formed Armstrong team was pretty good. It was neat seeing certain faces from Ford City and Kittanning playing together on the same team." Lewis scored seven points during the game.

Players discuss importance of personal relationships in the game

While "love" in tennis usually amounted to zero points scored, a more traditional meaning of the word surfaced for both the boys' and girls' teams. In particular, playing doubles required teammates to develop a passionate understanding for each other's playing styles.

Kylie Zaffina (10) said, "Tennis is a big team sport. We have to really know each other's strengths and weaknesses during matches."

The supportive nature of the tennis team also had a major impact on Olivia Shirley's (10) passion for the sport.

Shirley said, "I love tennis, but one of the best parts would have to be whenever I'm at practice or a game. I can count on my team to either help lift my spirits or congratulate me when it's going well. We're like a big family, and everyone is super easy-going. We laugh a lot together, and that helps to take the stress off of playing."

"I look forward to tennis every day because it is always a ton of fun. It is different than soccer because there are less people playing on the team, and it is an entirely different style of play," Adam Malagari (12) said.

huddle it up...

Right before the September 8 home match against Hempfield, the team has a group huddle. "Teammates are so important, especially if we lose. We're always there to support one another and give each other motivation," Olivia Shirley (10) said. She played both doubles and singles for the team.

that one question...	Alec Eshenbaugh reliability (12)	"Knowing my team is counting on me and my partner to win makes me try harder."
	Matt Pulsifer crush factor (12)	"I like standing close to the net where I can crush the ball on my opponents."
What drives you to succeed?	Olivia Shirley power (10)	"I love the feeling you get when you hit a really good shot or a really powerful one."
	Alexis Shaffer difficult level (10)	"I love tennis because it's not easy, and it gives me something to work harder at."

Players
discuss value of tournament just up the road

Boom! Smack! Boom! Smack! The ball thundered against the worn floorboards. The air smelled of sweat and desperation. A knife could have sliced through the tension in the gym, all waiting for one thing; the whistle. Saturday tournaments contained all these experiences and emotions.

From hand packed lunches to greasy concession grub, tournaments always involved food. Saturdays became an excuse to eat almost anything for spectators and volleyball players alike. Since tournaments lasted roughly anywhere from eight to ten hours, proper preparation and sustenance never hurt. In between games, players either ate or slept to ensure they could last for the entirety of the long and exhausting day. The Freeport Tournament jump-started the season and soon became a team favorite.

Smirking, Jen Anderson (11) said, "I liked our first tournament the best because we played the hardest. It really made me think we were going to have a great season."

A few players liked the opportunity to meet and compete with friends on opposing teams.

"Freeport was my favorite tournament. I play club volleyball with a lot of Freeport girls, so getting to play against them and beat them when they are a notoriously well-rounded team was extra special," Sydney Hessom (12) said.

Bailey Seagriff (12) said, "I loved the Freeport Tournament because both my parents went there, and it felt so good to beat their Alma Mater. My Dad had also been Prom King there which made it even funnier."

calm me down...

Before the start of the game, the players line up together to listen to the singing of the National Anthem. "It's a time for us to get focused and pay tribute to our country," Sydney Hessom (12) said. Hessom started playing volleyball at age nine.

up for the block...

Leaping above the net, Rachel Vanetta (12) tries to block and prevent the ball from going over during the September 9th home game against Norwin. "Whenever you block, you have to close your hands and keep them together so that the ball doesn't go through," Vanetta said. She served as a middle hitter on the team.

all about positions

"When you set, you have to send the ball perfectly with good technique. Otherwise, you could be called for an error with doubles, and your hitter won't be able to get a good spike."

Cassie Shoupe (9)

"Middle hitters have to cover for the outside hitters when they miss the ball or can't get to it. It's important to keep your eye on the ball and leave enough room for the setter."

Dara Zelonka (9)

"Outside hitters have to have a different approach than everyone else. We start way back and try to hit the ball across the court diagonally without sending it out."

Allison Russell (9)

"Playing back row is tough because whenever you bump the ball to the setter, it has to be perfect or else there's no way to score a point. You have to dive for the ball no matter what."

With her eye on the ball, Jen Anderson (11) serves to try and score a point. "When I serve, I look for the other team's worst passer and think about how I can't miss her," Anderson said. The upcoming 2016 season will feature only two seniors.

Crouching below the underclassmen, Bailey Seagriff (12) runs through her teammates as the announcer introduces her. "It's a tradition that we do every home game for the varsity team members," Seagriff said. Her jersey number, 13, was her Mom's old softball number, too.

"My proudest moment for me was making the volleyball team. I was on the team in both 7th and 8th grade and played back row because I could dig well."

Best boys team in Cavalier history revisits season

Agile feet flew across the field leaving torn up grass and mud in their wake. "The ball goes to Mascolo!" shouted the announcer. "He's going, he's going . . . He shoots and SCORESSS!"

"I scored the only goal on Senior Night when we won 1-0; that's something I won't forget. This season, we became a family, and it was bittersweet knowing we won't play together again. Still, I'm glad I don't have to deal with the stress anymore," Nick Mascolo (12) said.

Boys soccer blew through the games that lead up to playoffs with ease, winning four out of five. Success in the playoffs and the regular season lead them to the Semifinal game, where the boys lost 4-0 to Fox Chapel after a well fought battle. Despite their successes, Senior Night still stood out to the boys as one of their favorite moments as a team.

Zachary Geiselhart (12) said, "Senior Night was hard to take in. I'm still going through soccer withdrawal now after the season, but it was something I will always remember."

Even for those who had witnessed the Senior Nights of previous seasons, the night still came as an emotional surprise.

"I kind of prepared myself because I have been around Senior Night a lot so I knew what to expect, but it didn't hit me until a couple days after that the last home game was gone and I only had a couple games left," Christian Fox (12) said.

Focus on the course involves mind over matter

In the middle of a grueling 3.1 mile race, mustering up enough motivation to continue on toward the finish line pushed the limits of minds and bodies. Hearts raced faster than the runners themselves, but athletes grasped onto the idea of putting mind over matter in order to overcome the demanding task at hand.

"I think of my strategy well before the race," Darcy Bowman (10) said. "I close my eyes and envision the challenge in front of me. I hope for the best, but I always accept my performance, no matter the outcome."

At the bang of the starting gun, Spencer Hepler (11) recalled a quote that stuck with her throughout the season. "The greatest victory is not winning against people, but winning against self." When I hit my breaking point, I recite this, and it has never failed to inspire me," Hepler said.

Eric Kennedy (11) further explained his methods toward success.

"While competing, I'm always sure to keep a clear head. I fixate my attention on the competitors around me. It's easy to wander off task and fall behind," Kennedy said.

Upperclassmen offered themselves as a model for younger, more inexperienced teammates.

"The other runners drove me to work harder every day, especially the older girls," Christa Reese (9) said.

Wrestling team talks about their real rival

Having an undefeated season added pressure to the wrestling team. They had something to protect, and they had to analyze each rival. While the local battle with Burrell remained a favorite, another team posed the biggest threat this winter.

Anthony D'Incau (12) said, "We don't really have a rivalry with Burrell. They may be the best in the AA, but we are 2nd in the AAA. People just think that because they're our neighbors. Still, they aren't much of a match for us. Belle Vernon is probably our biggest competition. They're number one in the AAA."

Chad Kuhn (12) agreed about the rivalry, and admitted to Belle Vernon's talents.

"Belle Vernon has some really good kids. Their 220 and I both give each other a good match. Their kids work just as hard as ours, and we expect a good match when we wrestle them next," Kuhn said.

Not letting Belle Vernon get in their heads helped the wrestlers to continue preparing for a match that Jordan Laero (12) believed the team could win.

Laero said, "Belle Vernon dominated their section on their side of the bracket, but so did we. We're both good teams with about an equal match up. They're number two in the state, and we're number four, but I know we're going to beat them."

it's just expected...

Taking down his opponent, Joey Blumer (11) brings Corey Christie (10) to the mat for a pin. "Our team is really good this year. We just all expect great things from each other," Blumer said. His older cousin inspired him to begin wrestling, and he has wrestled for 12 years.

In the 145 weight class, Anthony D'Incau (12) takes down Dean Edwards (11) from Burrell. "Our goal for the whole season was to make it to states. Since we are undefeated this late in the season, we just might do it," D'Incau said. Starting his wrestling career later than normal, D'Incau had to wrestle his way into the Varsity line up.

Against Burrell's Ethan Awes (10), Jake York (12) fights off a local rival. "This year, our top competition would have to be Bell Vernon. It will come down to the heavy weights and how they bump them around," York said. Every man in York's family has wrestled at least once.

last minute advice...

Just before he enters the mat, Mason Valore (11) accepts a welcome pep talk from Coach Kiebler at the home match versus Burrell. "When I get on the mat, I think of nothing except the person I'm about to face," Valore said. His father inspired Valore to start wrestling.

"When I was 12, I made a commitment to go to states for wrestling. I upped my practices from four days a week to eight or nine and ended up taking sixth in the state."

Hockey team examines high costs to play game

A broken foot, sprained ankles, multiple concussions, a fractured jaw, and broken teeth. While Pittsburgh Penguin Sidney Crosby earned 12.7 million dollars in 2015, the true cost of playing the game involved many injuries over the years. Still, for the members of the hockey teams, simple dollars just to play added up.

Defenseman Tyler Hartill (12) said, "It's ridiculous how much it costs just to play hockey. I remember having to shell out $1500, and that doesn't even cover our cost for equipment."

As if the dues to play did not cost enough already, other situations arose that broke many budgets as well.

Center Brandon Stephens (11) said, "Once, during a game against Franklin Regional, I forgot to bring my shoulder pads. It was too late to go back home to get them, so we had to shell out $80 for a new pair. I was lucky that the Pro Shop at the rink had new ones. My parents weren't too happy about it. Still, I needed a new pair, so I didn't think it was a huge deal."

Sometimes, even the aggressive nature of the game cost money.

Center Jonathan Hartill (10) said, "I have bad luck when it comes to hockey sticks. I've broken about seven so far this season, and each one costs about $250. My mother would like to check me into the boards every time it happens. Sorry, Mom."

viper strikes...

Outside the opposing net, Nick Wallace (11) awaits Ben Sites' (11) pass to move in for a quick score. "I've been playing hockey for so long that it's weird to think about graduating and not playing anymore. I would like to continue my hockey career in college one day," Wallace said. Outside of school, Wallace played hockey on the Pittsburgh Vipers amateur team.

Sometimes watching from the bench exceeds any other view. After all, witnessing your teammate get slammed into the boards, break expensive equipment, or, in Alex Ferraro's case, clumsily clamber over the boards, seemed preferable to experiencing it firsthand.

"Once on a delayed penalty, I had to hoist myself over the boards with my goalie gear on since the door wouldn't open."

Alex Ferraro (11)

all in the family...

Early in the season against Greensburg Central Catholic, Seth Thompson (12) prepares to make a shot on goal. "This is my last year playing for Kiski, and I would like to finish it off with a bang. With a little more practice, I believe we can do just that." He followed in the footsteps of his three older siblings by participating in the hockey program.

Before the December 12 game versus Wheeling Catholic, Evan Cooper (11) stretches out on the ice. "Our team is one-of-a-kind. We have played with each other long enough to know that we're a family," Cooper said. Cooper spent years playing with his brother, all under his father's coaching.

how to improve

James Ayres (12)

"Even though our team is quick this year, if we can learn to skate faster for next year, we would have many more opportunities to score. Speed is the key to success."

2
Luciano Paradise (12)

"As a team, we need to find a way to communicate and work together better. However, for me, I need to improve upon my speed and positioning."

Nicholas Gabrielli (12)

"The team needs to be more confident to get more shots on net and rebounding chances. The more shots we make, the more scoring opportunities we get."

What does the team have to do to really improve for next year?

"I'll never forget when our Kiski Area JV hockey team finished the 2014-2015 regular season in first place."

Track team prepares heavily for states

The road to states had no easy route, forcing track athletes to stay motivated through the ups and downs of their training. Every lap they ran around the school during practices got them closer and closer to the track awaiting them in Hershey, Pennsylvania.

On how she prepared for the meet, Megan Aller (12) said, "The only thing I really did out of the ordinary was I did more hill workouts because I knew states was hilly." Aller had an idea of what to expect because of her experience of competing in states as a freshman.

"I was still a little nervous, but I felt prepared because I had run the course before."

Jace Roundtree's (12) preparation for states also came from his prior experience as a runner. "WPIALS got me in the mindset of racing against the best. I think it makes me work harder, mindset-wise, because I know the people I'm competing against are really good."

"I felt tired because it was my last meet, and training by yourself is hard. Still, when I actually went to race, I ran my hardest," Aller said.

Roundtree agreed and said, "I didn't feel great by finals, which was my second race. But, for my first race of the day, which was prelims, I ran my hardest against the wind. My nerves definitely kicked in."

Even minutes before the race, the months of training kicked in, as well.

"I just think to myself about not falling behind and strategies to pace myself," Eric Kennedy (11) said.

Don't look down...

With proper positioning, Kyle Wadsworth (11) competes in the triple jump at Mars High school. "While I am jumping, I have a really bad habit of looking down, and it cost me jumps sometimes", Wadsworth said. He actually injured his groin after the last of his triple jumps that day.

that one question...	Sammie Cooper Jumper (12)	"It really takes the perfect mixture of speed and strength."
	Jack Tamasy Thrower (12)	"You have to use your whole body and a lot of precision."
What does it really take to excel in your event?	Isaac Stevenson Sprinter (11)	"You have to have a great balance of speed and endurance."
	Spencer Hepler Distance (11)	"It takes lots of practice running with no breaks."

Finishing the first leg of the 4x100 meter relay race at the Baldwin Invitational, Sadie Shannon (11) exchanges the baton to Britt Palla (11). "Our relay teams have become really close friends this year, so when it became time to compete, it was easier to succeed as a team", Palla said. A young squad, the 4x100 meter relay team had no senior runners.

running phenom...

During the 4x800 meter relay race against Mars, Megan Aller (12) maintains the lead for the third 800 meter. "I always enjoy running the 4x800 relay no matter who we race against," Aller said. She attended the Pennsylvania State Track Meet all four years of high school and placed 23rd at the latest state finals held in November.

gotta get better...

Inside the Latrobe Stadium, Jace Roundtree (12) competes to win a medal in the county finals race. "Coming into this year, I did not know what to expect. Still, at the end, I've met many goals. But, I will keep striving for something better," Roundtree said. He won the County Championship in the 100 meter hurdles.

"My proudest moment was when I broke the school track record in the 1600 meter, a goal of mine since ninth grade. The record hasn't been broken over the past 20 years."

Players reveal pregame musts to acquire that edge

What do smelly socks, peanut butter, and blue belts have in common? According to members of the baseball team, these items contributed greatly to achieving wins against their opponents.

Jake Satterfield (12) said, "Every time we play a game, I always wear the same socks for good luck. The team and I also start every game by breaking on 'let's have fun!' It became a tradition, and it reminds everyone to enjoy themselves throughout the game."

"I always wear the same white stirrups to every game we play because it makes me feel comfortable," Jake Poremski (12) said. "It is also a must that I consistently wear the same blue belt as well. I feel as if it brings me good luck and helps us win games," he said further.

Nick Luciano (12) also had a lot to say when sharing his own rituals. "I put peanut butter in my glove for every game. I have to make sure that it is smooth and not crunchy to get the full effect. Peanut butter is sticky and helps me catch a lot better to help out my team," he jokingly said.

"You don't ever wash your socks until you lose a game," Nick Sofaly (12) said. "If you wash them beforehand, you automatically attract bad luck, and no one wants any of that."

Whether stinking up the outfield, or sticking up the pitcher's mound, players found small ritualistic ways to gain an edge going into games.

here's your sign...

Giving signs to the pitcher, Jake Poremski (12) signals how he wants the pitcher to throw. "I like baseball because there is no time limit. When you lose, it is when you give up on yourself," Poremski said. Poremski had played four years on varsity and two years on the freshman team while in intermediate school.

Winding up to pitch the ball, John Bowser (12) makes sure to line his stride up with his throw. "I've played baseball ever since I was a kid because I love the game and pitching," Bowser said. Bowser served as team captain and lead them to a WPIAL Championship.

after practice chores

"When the field is not properly managed, there can be bad hops that can change the outcome of the game. You never want that to happen. It certainly takes a lot of work to play baseball."

John Bowser (12)

"John Fink was in charge of gathering trash because the whole team was assigned jobs. The weirdest thing that Fink found was a syringe at the batting cages."

Josh Bell (12)

"After each practice, we all had two different tasks to complete. I was assigned to rake the mound. It took a lot of work to get it just perfect. You never want you pitcher to trip over uneven ground."

Tyler Baum (11)

"We pull the tarps out to guarantee that the infield will be nice and playable. A hard rainstorm can cause a lot of extra work before you can even play a game."

loosen up...

Warming up before the game, the varsity baseball players stay loose. "When I was younger, I always played whiffle ball. I ended up playing baseball because I liked it so much," Jake Satterfield (12) said. The exercises improved agility before each game.

ready and aware...

At a mid-season game on April 28 against Woodland Hills, Corey Shoupe (11) reads the catcher's signs for the upcoming pitch. "As short stop, I have to be aware of the catcher's intent so that I can prepare for a pick-off when a runner is on second."

"I was so nervous the first game that I pitched. Still, I put the fear to the back of my mind and ended up throwing a complete game with seven strikeouts and only one hit."

Thanks for school spirit...

For the blue and gold painted faces, for the Cookouts (started by 2004 graduate Joe Intrieri), for the cheerleaders, for storming onto the field prematurely, for the E-I-E-I-Os, for the theme-dress nights, for the rushes onto the field, for the hand-painted spirit banners, for the parents and community who faithfully attended, for the messages written on signs outside local businesses, and for the camaraderie.

Thanks for the bands...

For Alex Costanza and Mike Lamendola, for the percussionists, for the Friday night parades through town, for the twirlers, for Come Rain or Shine, for visionary Mr. Scott Koter, for the Fudge Nights, for the wind players, for the Band Nights, for playing the National Anthem, for the high-stepping Big Ks, for Imaginarium, for the boosters, for the brass players, for the majorettes, for the competitions, for the uniforms, for the airgrams, for the colorguards, and for Tocatta.

Thanks for the grass...

For the cushioned falls, for the sliding tackles through the mud, for the emerald green patches decorating the uniforms, and for coming back faithfully every spring.

quick six...

After scoring six points at the Bethel Park playoff game, Noah Clayton (11) and Jon Bracy (11) bump chests in mid-air. Clayton said, "I had just caught a jump-ball pass from Chad in the end zone. Jon was there immediately to help celebrate." Unfortunately, the boys came up short at the end of the season-ending game.

At the mid-season Tri-Meet against Highlands and Mars, Sadie Shannon (11) leaps over the hurdles aligned down the 100-meter lane to cross the finish line with her best time. "I decided to do the event because there weren't any girl hurdlers at the time, and I'm a fast sprinter," Shannon said. She also competed in the 100-meter sprint, the 200-meter sprint, the 4x1 relay, the long jump, and the 300-meter hurdles.

If we answer honestly, we originally joined most of our clubs for the satisfaction of seeing them printed on our transcripts. "Colleges looked for well-rounded students," said mostly everyone interviewed, and the fear of the intimidating college decisions served as a great motivator. However, a few morally superior students joined the variety of clubs available to them because they understood just how much we as a school could accomplish. We did not always remember what we did for the community until we saw bus loads of Key Club and SADD students filter in the community for Youth Day of Caring. We did not always notice what these clubs did for ourselves until we looked around at the other students standing around the flagpole for Bible Club or the other yearbook staff members typing furiously on computers next to us. Then, we realized we all worked together for something important, something we all loved.

Elizabeth Postle (12), president of Key Club, represented one of those superior people. Of her duties to the club, Postle said, "The feeling I get after volunteering somewhere, lessening a burden on someone, giving back to your local community, or simply speaking kind words to someone is absolutely priceless. I am not President of Key Club for a resume, an application, or to look 'good.' I do it because it makes me happy, and I genuinely care about making even a small impact. Service and volunteering is not just a 'club', but it's a way of going through life, giving back, being appreciative, and using your heart."

The compelling feeling that resulted from participating in our clubs motivated us to continue making time for them, even when our to-do lists ran rampant.

Bible Club member Caleb Hansen said, "In the mornings when we all get to pray together and Jordan Laero sometimes sings and plays his guitar, it's a powerful feeling because we can all come together in a public school and do this. I feel like I have a better day when I get to start it by praying with them."

"Get me an awesome shot for the dominant on the yearbook spread." PF

- 1) We borrowed the guard mirrors from the band room.
- 2) We then positioned them all around us in the exit foyer below room 140.
- 3) We had to continuously rearrange the mirrors to get a reflection that worked for our shots in a tiny space. It was maddening.
- 4) After about two hours of adjustments, we got the shot.

Staff
thanks adviser for lessons and guidance

In their tiny, dimly lit room, inconspicuously located on the way to the lower cafeteria, the yearbook staff built the book held in your hands at this very moment. Many tears from the editors, lamentations of the literary staff about their inability to use "be" verbs, and a few well placed expletives arose along the way. Still, the assisting nature that embodied their legendary adviser, Mr. Fantaski, eased the entire process.

"I love Mr. Fantaski. The fact that he teaches us everything and is selfless enough to let us learn how to operate the programs even though it takes longer, and the fact that he never gets annoyed when we call him down for help a million times in a row, is just great," Jayne Hohman (12) said.

The entire yearbook staff wanted to thank PF for the rants he listened to, the creative abilities he helped to culture, and his passion for so many books. We love him and will miss him like crazy during his much deserved yearbook retirement.

"Staying after school to help Red Ribbon Week was the greatest experience. Helping the school spread drug awareness really made me feel as if I was contributing to the community."

Club: Cavalier Lead. Council Adam Poleski (10)

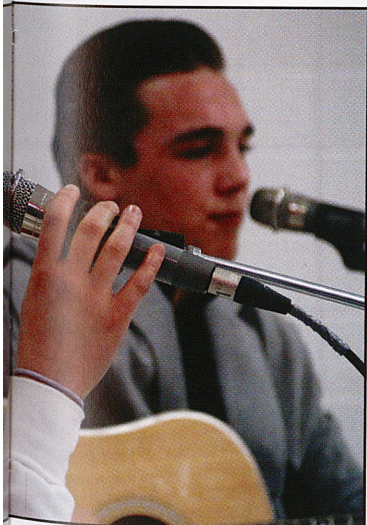

"The best moment in CLC was when we had an all-morning meeting before Thanksgiving Break. It was fun, productive, and really showed how involved the AD wanted to be with the council."

Club: SADD Kelsey Kinnamon (12)

"We were able to interact with little kids and teach them good skills and ways to cope with the change to the bigger schools."

Club: Community Outreach Aubry Chickerella (10)

"The best moment in COP was when we fund-raised money to buy toys at K-mart for underprivileged kids. It was special thinking about how happy those presents will make the kids feel."

Sweet Sounds...

During the Coffeehouse on the last day before Christmas break, Jesse Rachal (9) performs one of his ten songs. "I wasn't really nervous because I practiced 4-5 hours every day since I found out I was chosen," Rachal said. Rachal also performed previously at his church.

Songs of Love...

Singing Love Yourself by Justin Bieber, Letizia Collini (12) entertains her audience with Jordan Laero (12). "We didn't really know how it was going to turn out since we only had one practice, but we pulled it off," Collini said. Collini played piano for some of the songs.

"Practicing with Mr. Traugh every day is the best part of Concert Band. He teaches us a lot about music and reminds me to work my hardest in everything that I do."

Club: Jazz Band A Casey Maher (12)

"Performing with Wayne Bergeron, who is easily the best trumpet player in the world, was awesome. He taught us what it is like to play professionally in a world-renowned jazz band."

Club: Marching Band Joshua Hanzlik (9)

"The best moment in Marching Band was when we went to Nationals in Indiana. Even though we did not win, it was a blast and a learning experience for us all."

Club: Jazz Band B Justin Smeltzer (10)

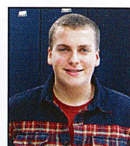

"We put a lot of work into our performances. It feels really great seeing everyone have a good show and seeing that the audience enjoyed our program."

hands up...

On August 12 while learning the show, the marching band practices the first movement. "We had to look up at Mayce Auden (6) when we introduced the aliens into the show," CJ Thomas (12) said. Auden also performed in winterguard.

"One of my proudest moments was when I made Jazz Ensemble A as a freshman. It is an amazing band, and I hopefully will be in it all four years of high school."

circle of friends...

While on the summer Spain trip, a mixture of Spanish 3 and 4 students take a picture in Park Guell in Barcelona. "We really liked the mosaic above so we set the timer on one of our phones on the ground and all looked down at the camera," Gillian Debick (12) said. The students visited the park on one of their first days there.

Spanish moves...

To get a feel for the Spanish culture, students participate in salsa dancing in the atrium. "It's a really fun experience, especially if you have your friends with you," Katie Dibiasio (12) said. Dance instructor Marvin Silva taught the students at the annual event for the past 10 years.

Standing in the bleachers of Davis Field, we looked out and watched the colors of the sunset as they melted together and dripped down the sky. It left an appropriately navy backdrop for the oncoming fluorescent lights. The smell of the concession stand slowly made its way around the stands, the most effective advertising to convince fans to buy that walking taco. We screamed school chants at the top of our lungs and suffered sore throats the next day, froze solid to support our friends out on the field, stood next to our crushes during the games with our stomachs dropping every time we brushed shoulders, belted out National Anthems, and cried as we watched our sisters and brothers walk across the stage for graduation. Davis Field gave us all those gifts. Still, before us, before our parents, before it even served as a football field, Davis housed the Vandergrift Pioneers, a minor league baseball team who played from 1947 to 1950. Certainly, whether hosting a baseball game back in the day, or more recent football games on Friday nights, we each had our own recollections of 109 Grant Avenue.

"During the game, Plum had the ball in their possession, but we tackled the runner and he fumbled the ball. By returning the fumble, it changed the momentum of the game. With seven seconds left, the people in the stands flooded onto the field, thinking it was over. Due to the excitement on the field, Kiski got a penalty for unsportsmanlike conduct. Still, it was awesome," Noah Clayton (11) said.

Sometimes, bits of paper brought back memories of Davis Field. "I live in East Vandergrift so I would walk with Natalie Shoemaker since she lived near me. Every time I would go there, people would buy tons of those bags of paper confetti. Kids would throw it in your hair and it would end up being all over the ground and the bleachers. I swear some of it's from the 1980s," Amanda Haught (11) said.

For one, the weekly processional into the field meant the most. "I'll always remember parading through town into Davis Field. Regardless if it was my time as a student, guard instructor, or parent watching my first grader march with the cheerleaders, the excitement in the air during those parades was contagious. When I reflect back on those many Friday nights, I can instantly smell the fall leaves, hear the drum line cadence, and feel a rush of pride; they are truly memories that will last a lifetime," Mrs. Pityk (fac) said.

Just behind the school now stands the shiny new field, ready for the Cavalier spirit to arrive in the fall. Still, historic Davis Field became home for so many generations. It's now time to move on. So long, good friend.

Big K tradition...

As the crowd of fans rolls in to Davis Field, the marching band high-steps onto the field and arranges themselves in a K to play the Fight Song. "The Big K is important to us because we have to pump the people up before the game starts," Dom Bucci (12) said. The students learned the traditional formation during the summer at band camp.

You have grown into an amazing woman! Never lose your curiosity or spirit.

Remember, the world is your oyster!

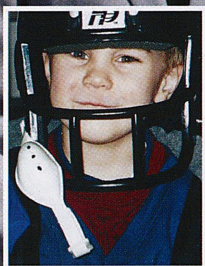

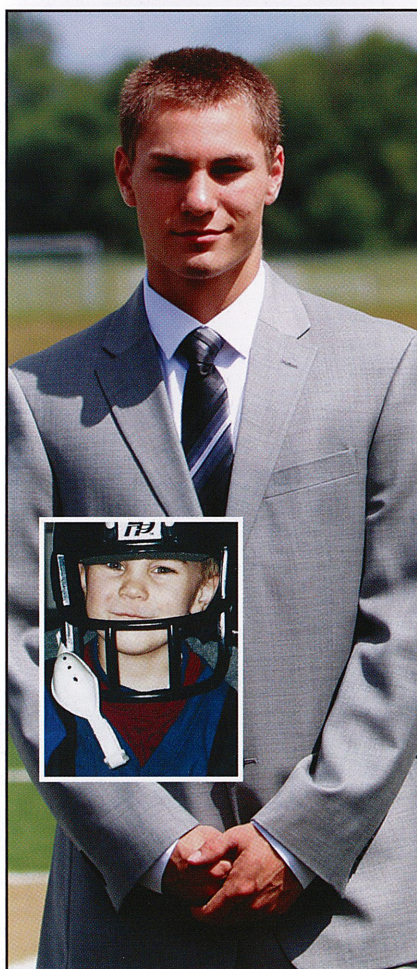

Love you, Dad, Mom, and Cody

Haley,

The time has finally come for the next chapter in your life. You have worked so hard to get to this point. The sky is truly the limit for you now! We have been so blessed to have a wonderful daughter like you. Time has flown by, and you have given us memories that will last a lifetime. We will never forget the beautiful little girl you were and the amazing young lady you have become! We can't wait to see what your future holds. Dream big, and reach for the stars!

We love you!
Mom, Dad, and Melanie

Michael,

There aren't words that could adequately describe the joy of 18 years of you! We have been so blessed to have had a front row seat to watch you accomplish everything you have set out to do. The hard work, dedication, and pride that you put into being a Cavalier is simply inspiring. Your leadership, loyalty, integrity, determination, and compassion are just a few of the things that make you so extraordinary. Your strength is beyond what they know, and your courage is far greater than we could ever imagine. We couldn't be any more proud of the man you are, and we couldn't be any more confident in how amazing your future will be!

Love you... Mom, Dad, and Anthony

You have been just a joy to watch grow and flourish over the years.

You have turned from an adorable, tiny dancer into a beautiful young lady who danced through life making impressions on all in your path. We have no doubt that you will succeed in whatever path you choose! We are so proud of all of your accomplishments, but mostly for the strong, beautiful, and determined young lady that you've become.

We are your biggest fans and will support your decisions always!

Love, Mom and Dad (XOXOXO)

Katie...

Eric...

We don't know where the years have gone; it seems like yesterday we were putting you on the bus for the first time. Now, the time has come for you to graduate. We have loved watching you grow from this cute, little, sweet boy, into this loving, handsome, and smart young man. We are so proud of you and look forward to watching you grow in this next chapter of your life!

Love you, a bushel and a peck... and a hug around the neck!

Mom, Dad,
and Brandon XOXOX

Daija,

It is moments like these that I realize the extent of my blessing in being your mom. You've brought so much joy to my life as I watched you grow into the beautiful and intelligent young woman you are today. I am so proud of your determination to accomplish your goals and in your ability to overcome obstacles. I am certain that whatever path you choose, you will be successful!

I love you always, Mom

Paris,

We knew from day one that you were special. You were headstrong, competitive, and determined. We have watched you go from a little "nit" that would only let her "DAD" put on her swim cap and goggles, to an independent young woman who makes us so proud in all she does.

Go confidently into this next chapter of your life. Your family will be behind you all the way!

Love you, Mom,
Dad, Madison, &
Paige

It's hard to believe how fast the years rolled by. It seems like only yesterday those Elmo slippers were speeding down the hallway. You were so full of energy, just as you are now. We are so proud of the smart, beautiful young lady you have become. We know you will be successful in anything you chose to do. Congratulations!

Love, Mom, Dad, and Josh

Watching you grow from a sweet, smiling little girl to the wonderful, caring woman you are today has been one of the greatest joys of my life. You are beautiful and smart. You are compassionate and loving. You are amazing. I am so proud of you and so incredibly lucky to be your mom!

*I love you, baby girl.
Always, Mom*

Congratulations Hannah!! We are so proud of you and your many achievements. We are excited to see what you conquer next.
Love ya always, Mom, Dad, and Sarah

Janine,

God blessed us with a beautiful gift when he gave us you. You have brought so much joy to our lives. I remember the day you were born like it was yesterday. You came into this world like a ball of fire. It was the beginning of your incredible journey. Never tell yourself that you can't do something because you can do whatever you set your mind to. You are so talented and so caring. You are strong-willed and level-headed. Stay that way, and you will go far. Don't forget anything is possible through perseverance. You are my beautiful princess. We are so very proud of you! Remember that we will love you and will always be here for you.

Love, Mom & Dad

We are so proud of the young man that you have become! You are our youngest, and I remember when you were born realizing that you wouldn't graduate high school until 2016. "Wow," how far away I thought. Well, here we are in 2016!

You have a strong mind and gentle heart to go along with a toughness that you come by honestly. Never give up on your dreams or ambitions, and you will reach your goals!

Oh, and have some fun along the way!

Love, Mom and Dad

Big Buddy,

You are a blessing to us. We are extremely proud of the kind, generous, inquisitive, amazing, intelligent young man you have become. We are truly blessed to be your parents as you make us proud every day! We wish you a life full of happiness as you close this chapter and begin anew. There are no limits to what you can do. Work hard, follow your dreams, and believe in yourself. Wherever your journeys may take you, we will always love and support you.

*Congratulations, Alexander!

Daryn,

We are so proud of you and all you have accomplished. The years of dance, marching band, winterguard, wind ensemble, swimming, and excelling at academics all the while, have shown us your determination and dedication. We have been blessed to watch you grow from a sweet little girl into a beautiful young woman. We know you will be successful in all you set your mind to do. Believe in yourself and know we will always be right behind you.

Love, Mom, Dad, and Daniel

Haley,

We are so very proud of you and everything that you have accomplished in all of your high school years and throughout your entire life. You are a beautiful girl, both inside and out. You grew from being a shy, little elementary school girl to a confident young lady with a sweet and bubbly personality. Your confidence in everything that you do has given you so many opportunities and has made you such a positive role model to others. We will miss watching you cheer at high school games, perform in show choir, and succeed in all your activities, but we are certain that you have a bright future ahead of you, and you will continue to make us proud. We love you so much and wish you the best in all that you do.

Love, Mom & Dad

You have been a loving, sweet, kind, and beautiful person since the day you were born. You have such an incredible ability to make those around you feel happy and loved. You are so full of life and love. It has been such a joy to watch you grow into a beautiful, kind, loving, and strong young woman. You can accomplish anything you put your mind to. We are all blessed to have you in our lives. Stay true to yourself and your beliefs. The world is a better, brighter place with you in it!

In life, we don't remember the days, but we remember the moments. We have had some awesome moments! Good Luck In All You Do!

Love, Mom, Dad, and Alexis

Congratulations! You did it! You made it through the high school experience, and you did it well! There are so many things we want you to know upon your graduation. First and foremost, YOU ARE LOVED. There is nothing that could ever change that. Life will lead you down many paths, and you'll have to make many choices along the way. We are here for you, and you can always depend on our love. LOVE YOURSELF. You are uniquely you...there isn't a soul on earth that is the same. Embrace your strengths and opportunities. BE PATIENT. Take the time to find what works for you in this world. Enjoy all of the experiences life gives you along the way. ENJOY these college years ahead of you, and like you always do, stay focused on what you want the outcome to be. Lastly, THANK YOU. Thank you for bringing so much joy into our lives. Our happiest moments are watching you, talking with you, listening to you, and laughing with you. Just your presence brings peace to our hearts. We will always be immensely grateful and proud that we are your parents. We adore you.

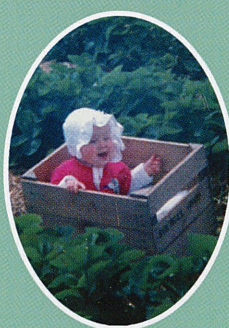

Now go get 'em! Love, Mom and Dad

Ian,

We are all so proud of you! We wish for the best of everything in your future. You are loved more than you know.

Life is a game. "The values learned on the playing field – How to set goals, endure, take criticism and risks, become team players, use our beliefs, stay healthy, and deal with stress – prepare us for life." Donna de Verona

Kelsey Jon Kinnamon,

We have been blessed to have the opportunity to watch you grow from a small child into a beautiful, strong, intelligent young woman. Though it may seem to you that it has taken forever to reach this point, it happened all too quickly for us. It is time for you to start the rest of your life, and we are so happy and proud that you are so well prepared and dedicated to your dreams. Never lose sight of those dreams, and never compromise anything to reach them. Success is determined by who you are and how you live your life. At the end of each day, we hope that you can look in the mirror and say that you did your very best, that you did the right thing, and that you did it the right way... and you can smile and be satisfied with how each game turned out. Always remember how very much we love you!

God sent us one of His angels. As we have watched you grow, we stand in awe of your selflessness, kindness, and giving to others. Your gentle ways and contagious smile attract people so quickly, allowing them to experience what a truly good person is; it's captivating to watch. I have said it before, "You are most definitely my hero." As you begin the next of many of life's journeys, you will never be alone as we go with you to help guide you and help you if you stumble. The word "proud" is not enough to explain the joy in our hearts and the emotions we have when we proclaim, "Yes, this is our daughter." We are so blessed to have you. We love you.

Mom & Dad

Monica Lynn,

Dad and I are so very proud of you, your accomplishments, and the beautiful young lady you have grown to be. You are the most honest and trustworthy young girl we know. You have the confidence to live your life your way and on your terms. The choices you make are true to yourself, your convictions, and the values you hold dear. Your personal style and your attitude towards life are true inspirations for all. Dad and I don't have to question your future—we know you'll be successful and happy in whatever path you choose. We are truly blessed to call you our daughter, and we love you more than words can ever say. Because you are who you are, we know you know that. Have fun in life, sweetheart, and live your dream; no one deserves it more!

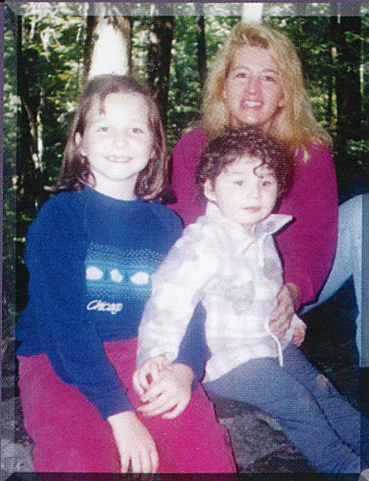

We Love You, and Happy Graduation!

Jake, from your start at Mamont Elementary to your finish at the Kiski Area High School, it has been our pleasure to watch you grow into the young man you are today. You have always surpassed our expectations, impressed us with your character, and made us proud parents. The little things you do impress us the most. Things like playing the Wii with Peter because it makes him so happy and taking Kyle to see a movie because time with his big brother makes him feel special.

Geneva College will be a great fit for you as you study hard to be a great engineer, play the game you love, and strengthen your faith. Best wishes, Jake, as you continue your journey that started with Mrs. Enciso holding your hand in Kindergarten and ended with Mr. DeSantis "getting your neck" in AP Physics!

Dear Adam,

You have brought so much joy and love to our family. We are extremely proud of you, your accomplishments, and are most proud of the young man that you have become. Life is full of challenges; it is how you respond that defines you. Keep a strong heart, stay true to yourself, and stand firm to what you believe. You have deep strength, integrity, and an indomitable spirit. Stay true to your core values as you move on in your life, and enjoy the journey wherever it may take you.

We love you more than you can understand,

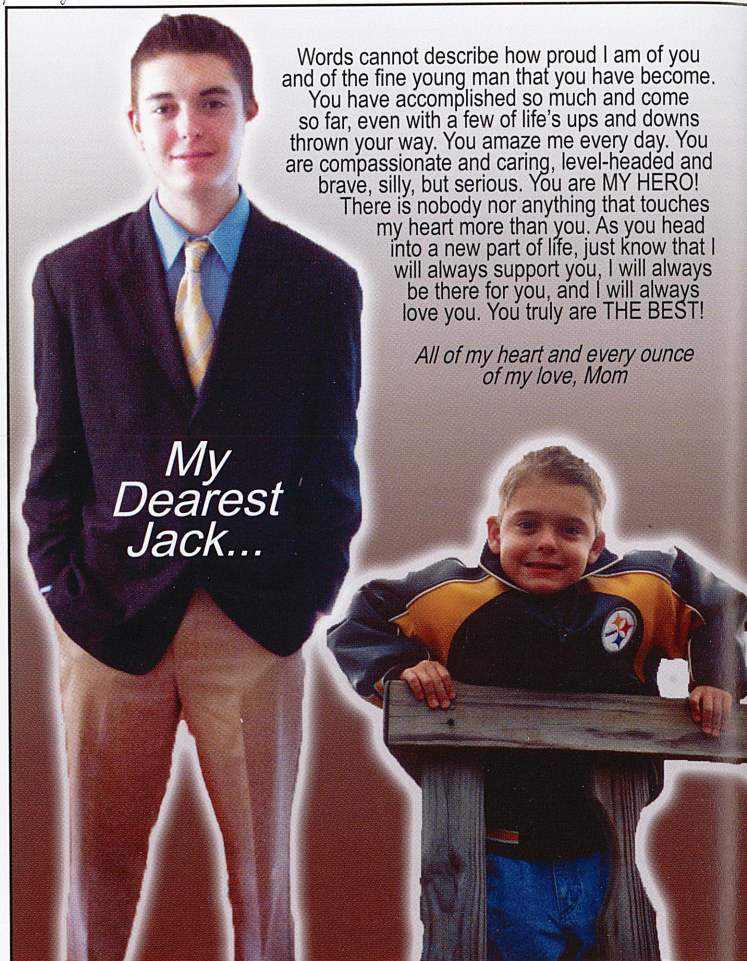

Mom and Dad

Words cannot describe how proud I am of you and of the fine young man that you have become. You have accomplished so much and come so far, even with a few of life's ups and downs thrown your way. You amaze me every day. You are compassionate and caring, level-headed and brave, silly, but serious. You are MY HERO! There is nobody nor anything that touches my heart more than you. As you head into a new part of life, just know that I will always support you, I will always be there for you, and I will always love you. You truly are THE BEST!

All of my heart and every ounce of my love, Mom

Love, Megan

We love you, Aimee! May all your dreams come true.

Mom, Dad, Matt, and Janna

Cass,

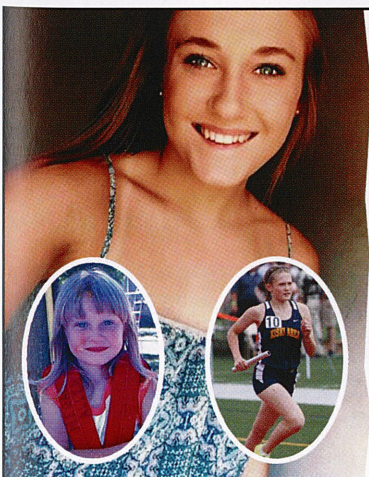

You did it... your time has come. You are truly a blessing to all of our family. We can't wait to see what God has in store for your future. He is going to use you in amazing ways. We love you, Cass!

Love, your biggest fans - Mom and Dad

Megan,

You have grown into a beautiful young woman inside and out. God has given you a very special talent; never take it for granted. Congratulations on all your accomplishments so far. Keep setting your goals high, and strive to be the best that you can be. We know that with your desire and work ethic, you can achieve anything you want in life. We are very proud of you and love you very much.

Mom, Dad, Katie, & Emily

"My proudest moment was when my grandma got emotional when telling me how proud she was of what I had accomplished so far. She never had opportunities like I am blessed to have."

Literary: You are all goddesses, and I love you dearly. You have put up with me while I sang, while I cried that one morning over a dog in a Santa hat, and while I hounded you over your use of "be" verbs. Angela, you are my fashion inspiration. Alyssa, please learn directions back to your house so I don't have to drive a half-hour out of my way. Taylor, you have never failed to make me laugh because your jokes are so subtle and unexpected and always hurt my feelings just a little. Aubry, you are always so motivated and willing to do anything I need. I appreciate that more than you know. Mykenzie, my only regret is that you weren't in our homeroom, and I didn't get to know you better. Liz, you use more onomatopoeias than anyone I know, and it cracks me up. You're so creative, and I'm excited for you to take over reporting staff next year. Mak, what can I say? Even when you write your story off-topic, I still love you to death, and you always make my days a million times better.

Reporting: Lindsey, your cute comments make the long days in the yearbook room short and enjoyable. Lindsay, you're adorable, and we must to thank you for the best-written captions in the state. Congrats! Ndunge, we loved being able to add you to our card games in the yearbook room, even when you beat us. I know you'll be able to handle all the work that will come to you next year. Zach, we love you and baby cactus and hope you are very happy together. Don't forget to water it sometimes.

Photography: Hallie, Kylie, and Olivia, we wish we were as cute and talented as you all; you have the sweetest smiles on staff. Stormie, we hope you never have to do burpees again, and we will always remember your sense of humor. Sarah, it's your first year on staff, and you got the opening photo of the book; congrats! Nikole, the photography in this book is most certainly yours. Thanks for your incredible talent and for sharing it with us all. Cass, congrats on your FOUR national championships.

Business: Bry, you are priceless, you keep everything in line, and your highlighter color-coding is second to none. Thanks for everything. Daryn, thanks for backing Bry up when she needed you. Jenna, you do hours and hours of work without complaining once. Know that Emily and I appreciate that. Maddy, we both have complete faith in your ability to keep Bry's Regime of Organization intact next year.

Photoshop: Jack, we gave you a pretty heavy workload, but you handled it well. :) Amanda, you logged more hours on that map of the United States than I thought was humanly possible, and I truly admire your patience. PS: It was killer.

PF: Jayne and I have a million things to thank you for. You taught us to be better writers, manage a staff, and notice the minute details that make our book better. You put up with repeated Whole Foods trips and late TX nights designing spreads. We think that Kiski's book will never be the same without your patience and the love you show for what you do. You've created an empire full of yearbook staff alumni who respect your talent and who will always remember the chance they got to work with you and learn from your vast journalism knowledge. We can't imagine the yearbook room without the sound of your keys constantly jangling as you run in and out, asking about showstoppers and assignments. We will miss you dearly.

The yearbook staff and the senior photographer conduct an assembly with all prospective seniors in the spring of their junior year to distribute all pertinent information concerning senior pictures. The senior photographer offers various times for individual appointments, as well as a wide variety of packages from which to choose. While we certainly encourage it, students do not have to purchase pictures or packages from the senior photographer. However, each student must pay a sitting fee for the processing and developing of the pictures. Next year, Hourglass Photo will charge $16. This price may increase from year-to-year due to rising costs involved.

The yearbook staff can guarantee that individual senior pictures will appear in the book only if each student schedules his/her appointment on time, arrives for the shoot on time, and chooses which proof to appear in the book on time. No profile shots will appear in the yearbook. Additionally, the yearbook staff and the senior photographer will define all due dates, and will include these in the information given out at the senior portrait assembly.

By having portraits taken by the same photographer under the same conditions, the yearbook staff can implement uniform quality for all photographs, thereby serving the best interest of all students.

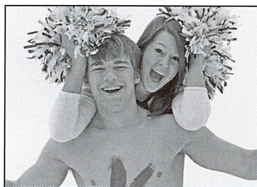

For the 2016-2017 school year, the district will utilize the talents of Ms. Paige Duckworth for all senior portraits. Her establishment, Hourglass Photo, resides at 2 Labelle-Vue Road - Vandergrift, PA - 15690. Telephone: 724-568-3128.

senior directory

Determined by deadlines, the yearbook staff designates a single week, usually in January or February, for seniors to complete a directory sheet that asks for clubs, sports, music ensembles, and future plans. The yearbook staff includes only directory information submitted by the designated deadline and reserves the right to expunge any entries that include falsified information.

Senior specials

Most School Spirit
Jared Atchison and Jenn Zatko
Class of 2009

While considered inappropriate in some yearbook judging forums, the Campus staff feels that the Senior Specials represent a Cavalier tradition worth keeping. Sometime after the winter holiday break, the yearbook staff designates one week for all seniors to vote on their favorites in a wide variety of categories. The staff collectively decides which categories to include and which to eliminate. Still, the staff tries to include only categories that reflect positively on the students.

Only the yearbook adviser counts the ballots for each and every category; yearbook staff members play no role in the election.

To maximize the opportunity for each student to receive a Senior Special, no senior may win two categories, with the exception of the "Best Friends" and "Class Couple" categories. Should one student win two or more categories, the yearbook adviser governs the final decision on how to award each category.

campus pricing

Students order books during Campus Weeks, the first two full weeks after Labor Day. (Note: Campus Weeks are subject to change depending on when school starts each year.) Each student must fill out a yearbook ordering form, place it in an envelope with the appropriate payment, and drop it in the wooden collection box outside room 106.

Students may pay half during Campus Weeks and half after the December holiday break if they wish. Still, if the student misses the announced deadline for second payments, a late fee may occur.

After Campus Weeks, students will pay an additional $10 for each book ordered.

The staff also offers the opportunity for students to order books online at yearbookforever.com. Additionally, those students have the opportunity to purchase various other items, but only when ordering online.

If there are books available at the end of the year, the yearbook staff will sell them on a first-come-first-serve basis.

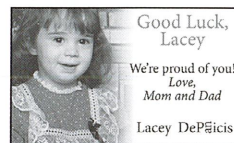

all about client satisfaction...

Because the yearbook represents a student conceived, planned, and produced publication, the staff cannot guarantee complete satisfaction to the purchaser. Hence, the staff will not refund money for poor portrait quality, misspelled names, incorrect grade designation in captions, etc. Books returned for refunds must not have any writing in them and cannot display any obvious damage done by the student. Once returned, the book becomes the property of the staff and may be resold at the current cost.

The yearbook staff will exchange books only for certain reasons. No exchanges will transpire unless the adviser determines that the book has a major flaw such as missing or upside-down pages. All refunds and exchanges happen only at the discretion of the adviser.

Should the yearbook staff have no record of a student ordering a book, the student must produce a cancelled check or online ordering receipt to demonstrate proof of the purchase. No student may pick up a book for another student.

On the first day of school, each senior receives a form that defines everything parents need to know about Parent Ads. The form outlines pricing, requirements for the ad, and relative deadlines.

The yearbook staff does its best to personalize each ad, and this takes a considerable amount of time. Furthermore, each year, the staff has only a limited amount of space for Parent Ads. Hence, to guarantee that individual ads will appear in the book, the staff suggests that parents submit them as soon as possible. The Campus staff reserves the right to deny Parent Ads once the designated amount of space has become filled.

tap into greatness...

Immediately following Chandler Bailey's (12) tap dance finale, he soaks in the applause from the crowd at the Key Club-sponsored Spring Talent Show. Bailey said, "Performing made me feel like a superhero. I have this amazing ability where

I think I can control each audience member's emotions for a short period of time.

Still, winning really doesn't make me feel as good as performing does. Everybody usually gets to win at something in life, but only few get to perform." Bailey won the high school division at the January 29th event.

the winners' circle...

Gathering to discuss the next play, as juniors, the Class of 2016 huddles up to defeat their senior rivals at the Powder Puff Game. "Going into it, we juniors knew that we had an advantage over the seniors because we had practiced more than they did. So, the feeling of all our hard work paying off and beating them in the end was unbelievable and one of my favorite memories from my junior year," Savannah Bruno (12) said. Talented off the gridiron, Bruno also played Peggy Sawyer in the spring musical 42nd Street.

school printer info

The 2016 Campus Yearbook represents the 54th for Kiski Area High School - 200 Poplar Street - Vandergrift, PA - 15690. Telephone: 724-845-8181. The staff ordered 770 copies from Walsworth Publishing Company - 306 North Kansas Avenue - Marceline, MO 64658. Cheryl Franzmann represented the book locally, and Cheryl Ball served as the Account Executive in the plant.

photography & pictures

Paige Duckworth - Hourglass Studio - 2 LaBelle Road - Vandergrift, PA - 15690 - 724-568-3128 - provided all senior and underclass pictures. She also shot all club group shots and sports team shots. The photography staff shot all candid shots using two school-owned Canon 60D cameras.

book specifics

This book employed a Smythe type binding with 100# dull enamel paper for all 252 pages inside. The Campus staff utilized Adobe InDesign and Photoshop from its CS6 suite to create the publication. The staff utilized three font families in the book:

Hand Times
